Minden's clerk ousted; Stevens says unjustified

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Three Minden councillors voted to terminate the employment of Clerk-treasurer Mary Mysyk, but a fourth says there's no cause for dismissal.

"Mary has always treated me with respect and I her," says Councillor Lewis Stevens, the only dissenting voice at Friday's special meeting. "I haven't had any problems thinking she wasn't respectful of my wishes."

If his fellow councillors have concerns about Mysyk's workmanship, they should give her the opportunity to comply to their suggestions or resign, he says.

"No one is perfect and the councillors should be the first to say they aren't," Lewis says. If perfection is demanded of employees, "we had better be a bit more perfect, too."

On Friday, council held an open meeting to vote on the termination. However, neither of the local newspapers was notified until after the meeting. The Echo phoned councillors at their homes over the weekend.

"The corporation of the townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden has terminated the employment of its clerk, effective midnight, May 10, 1991," says Deputy-reeve Bern Berry, who is acting as reeve in Ray Moore's absence. (The reeve is recovering from heart surgery.)

Mysyk was given notice of Friday's meeting but neither she nor her lawyer attended, Berry said. As to the press being there, "If anyone wanted to come, they could have."

Berry did not want to comment further. When asked if firing an employee without publicly saying why would cast aspersions on the employee, he did add "there is no theft involved, no money involvement.

"If you're going to terminate or chastise an employee, it shouldn't be done in public. I won't talk about the termination of an employee, any employee, I just won't."

When contacted, Councillor

Mike Maher and Councillor Bob Sisson also declined the opportunity to explain why they voted to fire Mysyk.

Mysyk, who's been on a leave of absence for the past few weeks, did not want to comment until her lawyer saw council's resolution

HOME DESTROYED: Twisted metal roofing and blackened base plates are all the remained of the home of Rosalind Clare at Haliburton Lake, after fire raced through the dwelling early Sunday morning. The cause of the blaze is not yet determined. Clare was living in the new home with her daughter.

An early morning fire Sunday gutted a Fort Irwin home and left its owner and her daughter homeless.

"We got the call at 3 a.m. Sunday morning," says Haliburton Fire Chief Miles Maughan. By the time firefighters arrived 25 minutes later at the home of Rosalind Clare, the year-old house near Haliburton Lake was already engulfed.

"It was already burnt down, there was nothing we could do but control it," says Maughan. Sixteen firefighters were at the scene for three hours.

Luckily no one was hurt, but it has been reported Clare received superficial burns.

Investigators are looking into the fire.

County council votes behind closed doors not to re-open budget

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

County councillors voted against re-opening their budget for review, but the decision might not be legally binding.

On Wednesday, Dysart Reeve Bill Davis presented a motion "that the County budget be re-opened to try and make further cuts."

The motion is signed by Bill Howe, chairman. Howe is the chairman of the management committee, an appointed committee of reeves which does not include deputy-reeves. The management committee can vote, but it's decision is only a recommendation to county council. County Council must ratify the vote.

When The Echo and the Chamber of Commerce phoned to see if they could attend the meeting, they were each told it was a closed management committee meeting.

If the meeting was to be considered a county council meeting, then all members had to be notified ahead of time, with the purpose of the meeting outlined. On Wednesday, county councillors were gathered to hear a presentation about the long-term healthcare study. "It was not a county meeting as such but while we were there, the warden asked us if we could stay since most of us were there," Barker said in an interview afterwards.

"It would have to be called a county council meeting because deputies don't sit on management," Davis says.

"Councillors could have waived proper notice (of the meeting)," says Don Campbell, a senior advisor with the Ministry of Municipal Affairs' Orillia office. However, "if some members were not there, they could not waive notice. They cannot call a special meeting and not notify members of council who are entitled to be there. If it was not a properly constituted meeting, any decision would not be a binding decision of council."

Absent were Minden Reeve Ray Moore, who's recovering from heart surgery, Cardiff Reeve Maurice Bradley, who has resigned and not been replaced, Cardiff Deputy-reeve Keith Murphy, who says he thought it was a management committee meeting and couldn't attend because of work, and Sherborne Deputy-reeve Hans Liebman.

Campbell says council has the discretion to make the meeting open or closed to the public.

"It would have to be called a county council meeting because the deputy reeves don't sit on management," says Dysart's Bill Davis.

Both Dysart and Stanhope councils passed motions that county council review the budget, the motions did not say management committee. "If that was not a county council meeting, I have no alternative but to follow the wishes of my council" and bring the matter up again at the next council meeting, Davis says.

Davis says at Wednesday's meeting he refused to discuss his proposals for cutting costs until members formally voted to open the budget.

Local river levels recede to normal

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Water levels are almost back to normal along the Burnt and Iron-dale Rivers, reports the Trent Severn Waterway office in Haliburton.

"There's no serious flooding right now," says Mac Ellis. Both rivers are well back within their banks, despite the soggy conditions of the last week.

"Conditions have improved a lot, the ground has finally thawed."

Two weeks ago warm temperatures and melting snow made the two rivers overflow their banks, causing wide-spreading flooding, the worst some communities had seen in years.

Ellis reports that levels in the TSW's storage lakes for the Burnt have dropped to the 100 per cent capacity level. During the flooding, most of the storage lakes were well above it.

After a slow winter, local retailers need better times ahead

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The federal government has deemed this National Consumer Week across Canada, whereby consumers and businesses are supposed to team up and start working for a stronger marketplace. But after an undeniably slow winter some Haliburton retailers are cautious in making predictions on how the economy will change over the next few months.

"I won't know what it'll be like until it gets here," says Marvin Varty of Varty Jewelry and Gifts about business's approach. Like most business people, he found this past winter to be slow.

"The recession is here, no question about it," says Stephen Patrick of Patrick Books in Haliburton. "But the Easter I had this year was better than last year and Easter has always been an indicator for a good summer."

Throughout the last month, business has dropped off, which Patrick blames on Spring. "April has always been a very slow month, you can't ski, you can't swim and most people haven't got to their cottages yet."

Chris Pritchard of Paulette's Gifts and Collectibles in Haliburton agrees with Patrick's observation.

"April is a lousy month and we

A TOTAL LOSS: Sharon and Dean Smith and their daughter Jacqueline lost all their possessions when fire destroyed their Salerno Lake home last Wednesday. A trust fund has been set up to help the family recover from their loss. The Smiths found out about the fire when they arrived at a friend's home for a visit.

Neighbours come to aid of burned-out Irondale family

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

An Irondale family has been left homeless after a fire destroyed their Salerno Lake home Wednesday afternoon.

"We've lost absolutely everything. The house burned right down to the ground," said a tearful Sharon Smith.

She and husband Dean had gone to visit friends in Minden. They arrived to bad news.

"Someone was waiting in the driveway. They told us our house was gone." The Smith's daughter Jacqueline was attending classes at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

Neighbours were the first to respond when they saw smoke rising over the trees, but it was too late. "By the time we got there the fire was already raging through the windows," said Robert Hancock.

He and a fellow neighbour were the first on the scene and the two attempted to battle the blaze using a sump pump, but to no avail. The Kinmount volunteer fire department arrived soon after but the one-story dwelling was already in ruins. "I'm just thankful no one was hurt," said a neighbour.

"I have no idea what's going to happen or what's going on," said Smith. "I don't even want to go near it. Right now we just want get some clothes." At the moment the family is staying with some friends in Irondale.

The Smiths have lived on Salerno Lake for six years and both Dean and Sharon are on government disability pensions. To help out the stricken family, friends and neighbours around Irondale have set up a trust fund at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Haliburton.

Investigators are looking into the cause of the blaze.

Harcourt residents in court over bear parts

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Four months after being charged for selling animal parts illegally, three Harcourt area residents have had their day in a Killaloe court.

The Echo has learned, courtesy of The Eganville Leader, which attended the trial April 11, that charges against Charles Main and Loraine Hughey were dropped. After changing his plea to not guilty, Don Meharrie was fined $880 for selling six black bear galls.

A total of 12 people were charged last December for illegally selling animal parts to undercover conservation officers. Their arrests came after a year-long joint investigation between the Ministry of Natural Resources and the OPP.

Evidence brought to light during the trial suggested that both Main and Hughey had been persuaded by an undercover officer to sell bear galls they had stored. Defence lawyers argued this constituted entrapment.

The officer posed as a buyer from Quebec, where it is still legal to sell bear galls, and approached Main. Although Main possessed 13 galls, it could not be proven he offered to sell them to the undercover officer.

As a bear guide, Main told the court the galls were "tips" left to him by some of his clients. Even though the MNR began enforcing its law against selling bear galls in August of 1989, Main said he kept the galls because he didn't want to let them go to waste.

A similar defence was used for Hughey, who was approached by the same undercover officer. Originally the officer attempted to contact Hughey's husband, also a bear guide, but in turn asked Hughey if she had any galls for sale.

He said she took two galls out of a freezer, but did not weigh them or offer to sell them and said she wanted to compare his price against another offer. Hughey's lawyer argued not wanting to weigh the galls proved that his client had no intention of selling the galls to the officer.

The week before four Whitney area men were fined more than $3,600 for their involvement in selling animal parts, and a fifth man had five charges withdrawn.

A total of 35 charges were laid by the MNR under the Game and Fish Act which prohibits the sale, possession or offering for sale parts of game animals. The charges stem from the sale of parts of three moose and 104 bears, all of which were legally taken during hunting season.

The majority of illegal parts are often sold to buyers in the Far East who use the exotic items, such as moose antler in velvet, in medicines. The average bear gall bladder sells for at least $75 and moose antler in velvet for $15 a pound.

Reasons unclear for clerk's firing

and press release.

As to not attending Friday's meeting, she says she did not request the meeting. Under the Municipal Act, "if a person wants a meeting it's my choice."

Lewis doesn't know why Mysyk's termination is effective May 10. "I don't know whether there's anything in that or not."

He says they've offered her a three-week severance package, which he says may conform to the law but "morally, there's not a lot of consideration given to it. I would hope we could do better. I wouldn't want to handle an employee that way."

It will take Mysyk a few weeks to find other employment and he thinks there should be more compensation. If she sues for wrongful dismissal and wins, this will cost the taxpayers a lot of money.

Meanwhile, it's still not clear why the municipality is firing

Mysyk, who's been clerk since September, 1987. "For some councillors it's a matter of life and death if they don't see everything that's going on," says Stevens, while others are very attentive to the clerk's every action. There was also criticism about information not being distributed quickly enough. "Councillors had items they thought could have been handled better."

Stevens also believes this is a bad time to be firing a clerk. "We're in the middle of recreation expansion, dealing with the budget, which takes a lot of involvement of the clerk, the PRIDE project and we're in the middle of ambulance union clarifications (because recently-negotiated pay increases are retroactive and staggered)."

"There's a lot of things that are particular to a clerk alone and I don't see where anyone is available with the knowledge our present clerk has."

BOE set to name its new director

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton County Board of Education is right on schedule in finding a new director of education and will announce Stuart Baker's replacement at tonight's (Tuesday's) meeting.

A special board committee held interviews last week, using the consulting services of Muskoka's former education director Cliff Whitfield.

At January's meeting, the board decided to hire a consultant to screen the applicants at a cost of $5,000 for 10 days' work. It was hoped the consultant would speed up the process so interviews could be held in April.

Tentatively, the new director will officially take over August 1, after Baker retires in July.

Chamber's reins are loosened; no new funds

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

County councillors agreed to lift their restrictions on how the Chamber of Commerce spends the county's grant, but refused to give any more funds to the cash-strapped tourist agency.

At a closed meeting on Wednesday, councillors agreed to the Chamber's request that the $32,700 grant be spent as the Chamber saw fit. The 1991 grant was unexpectedly cut in half of last year's amount of $70,000. This means the Chamber can afford to hire only one permanent staff person. In a resolution heartily endorsed at an emergency meeting on April 9, Chamber members requested a further $18,000 so another staff person could be retained.

Councillors voted against opening their budget, and therefore more funds could not be allotted.

"It's a big question mark right now," Chamber President Lyn Stevens says of how the Chamber will react. Lifting the restrictions "made it easier to make some decisions and we'll have to do some fundraising. We're going to have to do something to keep the staff we have."

Previously, if the Chamber facilitated tourist events in the area, such as the Ride for Sight, it handed all the business over to private enterprise. Now it will have to consider sponsoring the event and keeping all the proceeds.

"One challenge that our board has to meet is developing alternative sources of income while trying not to compete directly with the private sector," says Treasurer Shawn Hagerman, who has come up with a bare-bones budget yet to be ratified. "You have to tread carefully."

Agencies which previously made use of the Chamber's facilities, staff and resources for free will now have to pay for them, Hagerman says. This will include the county and municipal governments.

It's been suggested that Chamber members contribute an additional $50, which would amount to $15,000, enough to hire another office worker.

In reaction to the county's cuts, the Chamber has had to pare down the 10 services it will provide to six. The Chamber proposes that its new Tourism and Community Agreement will do the following: (comparisons to the previous agreement are in brackets)

1. Maintain a County Tourist Information Centre on a year-round basis.

2. Maintain our in-watts [toll free] telephone line for tourist promotion and make it available to local municipal and civic groups for their promotion to draw visitors and events to the county. (It previously agreed to advertise the number.)

3. Respond to all tourism inquiries. (It will no longer respond to economic development inquiries since the county now has its own department.)

4. Co-operate with all agencies, on a fee-for-service basis to promote Haliburton County as a tourist destination. (It previously did not charge a fee.)

5. Help attract convention business to the county on a fee-for-service basis. (It previously did not charge a fee and included bus tours.)

6. Maintain membership in the Central Ontario Tourism Association. (Previously this also included "the design, production and distribution of Haliburton County promotional literature and brochures." COTA will still, however, distribute this year's guides.)

The new agreement does not include the following services the Chamber was mandated to provide:

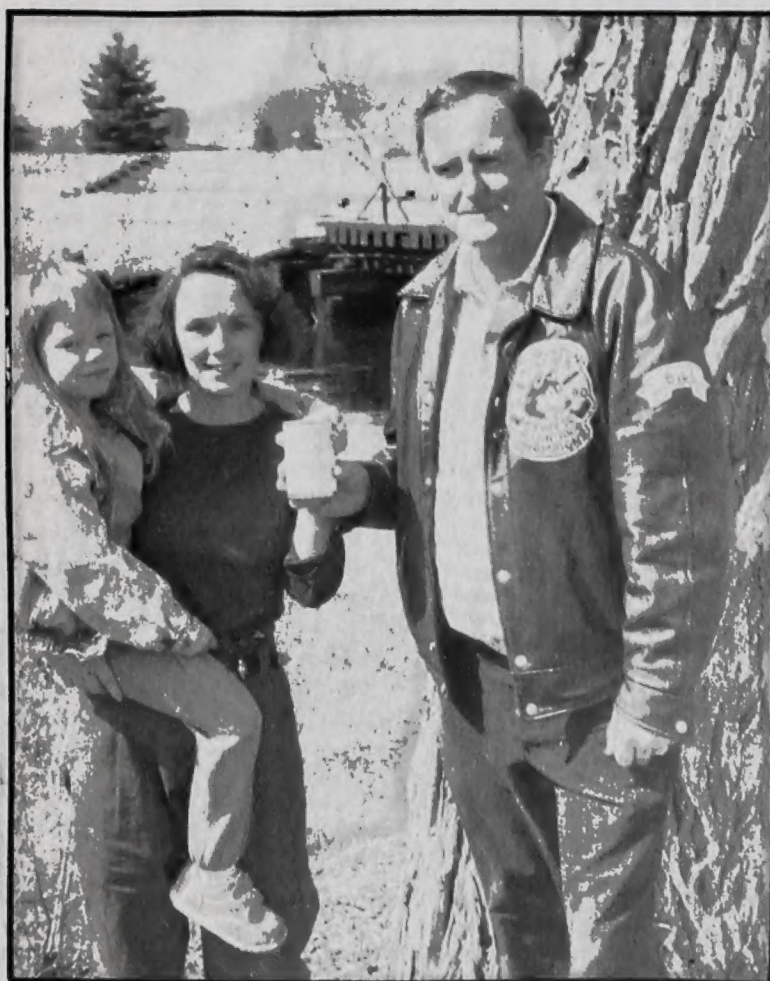

— Promote expansion and enhancement of existing tourism facilities and the development of new and different facilities

— Continue to help and be a resource to those municipalities which wish to maintain tourist information centres

— Aggressively promote the County through a comprehensive multi-facility marketing program consisting of year-round brochures, attendance at shows, and media advertising

It's the last discontinued service which is likely to rankle Chamber members the most, but Hagerman says he must be realistic about what the Chamber can afford. There is also not the manpower to attend the shows.

The total operating budget is now $69,200. "It's a realistic assessment of what the Chamber is capable of providing over the next 12 months and we will do everything possible to maintain our stated objectives."

A DIME A DAY HELPS H.A.V.E.: To raise funds to drill wells in developing countries, H.A.V.E. is distributing dime banks. Here, Claire and Lyn Duncombe and Dysart Reeve Bill Dysart appreciate Haliburton's abundance of clean, easily accessible water.

H.A.V.E. brings needy relief by a dime a day

A Dime A Day Will Keep Thirst Away, says the new fundraising slogan for HAVE (Help A Village Effort) committee.

To help raise badly needed money, members of the committee are distributing "Dime A Day" banks throughout the community.

Recipients are asked to pledge a dime a day to help drill new water wells in the poorest of the poor areas of India and Africa. To date, over 100 water wells have been drilled in these countries by HAVE and many more areas have been earmarked for their desperate need of fresh, safe water.

Over the past seven years, the HAVE organization has become very experienced and efficient at installing water wells in remote areas of Third World countries and the committee has generated a long list of valuable connections around the world where water related projects are badly needed. Every dollar raised goes directly to these and most projects are matched on a one to one basis financially by the Canadian International Development Agency. Regular monitoring of all projects is carried out.

The Dime A Day banks will be collected next Easter and a receipt for tax purposes will be issued. This is a chance for everyone to be a Friend Of HAVE and play a small part in helping others less fortunate to at least have access to fresh safe water in their daily lives.

To get your bank phone Lyn Duncombe at 457-3684, Willis McNeilly at 286-4700 or David Phillips at 286-2313.

MMA gives no definite funds to OP

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The Ministry of Municipal Affairs has not made any definite funding commitments for Haliburton County's Official Plan, says a senior municipal officer at the ministry's Orillia office.

"We're willing to fund something and that's as far as we can go," says Lynn Buckham, who's working with county planner Mark Stagg on the OP. "We can't possibly start to talk figures at this time in the game."

In the 1991 budget reviews, county council has ear-marked a $75,000 grant from the ministry to offset costs of the OP.

Getting funds "is not as simple as asking yes or no," says Buckham, contacted by The Echo. Every year the ministry likes to get some sense of the projects coming on line because "normally the money is set out a year in advance."

But counties must follow a rigid process. The OP's terms of reference have been sent to the ministry. It will take a few weeks for a review, Buckham says, and other ministries, such as Environment, are also asked for comment. The 10 municipalities in Haliburton County must also approve the terms.

Once suggestions are made and the terms are revised and approved, then it goes out to consultants for tender. When the consultant is chosen, only then does the ministry have some idea of the costs.

"We base the funding on how much the actual project will cost," says Buckham. "We don't even know a figure until the consultant's numbers come in."

Municipal Affairs is very supportive of Official Plans because it makes the county a lot easier to deal with. Buckham calls Stagg's terms "very ambitious" and says that when work began on the OP a few months ago, she suggested "don't bite off too much."

Stanhope reeves won't open budget was personally against re-opening the budget but voted Wednesday in accordance with his municipal council's wishes.

Meanwhile, Stanhope's representatives have no qualms about voting against the wishes of their council.

"Our feeling was there wasn't any room to manoeuvre (with the budget). We knew there was no elbow room to move," says Reeve Harry Davis. "We don't necessarily have the obligation (to follow wishes of municipal council.) At least I don't feel you do. I voted according to my conscience."

"My idea of that motion was to take it back and discuss the budget," says Barker. "I could not take money from the Chamber or our roads. We discussed it and felt that because there was nowhere to get the money from, there was no sense to open it."

"One of the past reeves was on county council and voted for these (new programs such as economic development and planning) to go in place and now he's kicking up a big stink or voicing his opinion, which is fine," says Barker, referring to Dysart Councillor Murray Fearrey. (Fearrey's rebuttal is in another story.) "I don't want to see this county go backward."

Previously, Davis was in support of some of Fearrey's criticism. After Wednesday's meeting, however, he said "I don't think they were very valid points. It's alright to step aside from county council and criticize it, but what does he want?"

As to the county not having the $75,000 budgeted as revenue for the Official Plan, Davis says Chief Administrative Officer Gary McKnight pointed out "there was so much money allotted to Haliburton County. My understanding is we have it in writing."

Fearrey suggested postponing economic development, under verbal assurances from the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology that the funding could be held until year. Davis said "I don't think that's true" and "it was too late" to postpone the strategy plan. Yet at the same time, Davis says "it would take awfully good economic development to produce any positive results."

Fearrey defends remarks on lowering county budget

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Murray Fearrey is defending his criticism of the county's budget, saying that if $1,000 was trimmed here and there, and costly projects were postponed, the budget could be brought down to less than a 20 per cent increase.

"I merely made the statement that the 35 per cent increase is unacceptable in the worst recession since the Great Depression and suggested that county council re-open the budget and review it," says Fearrey, a former county councillor who has come under fire both publicly and privately by county councillors who are angry he has spoken out against their budget.

On Wednesday, county councillors voted against re-opening the budget, and in doing so, reflected an opinion that Fearrey's cost-cutting suggestions were unrealistic.

"If they had honestly come back and said they could not do anything, I would accept that as a taxpayer," Fearrey said in an interview Saturday. "However, they chose as elected people, supposedly representing the taxpayers of Haliburton County, to bury their heads in the sand. They argued about the repercussions about opening the budget versus an honest, line by line, department by department review. Therefore I must conclude that they chose the take the criticism personally rather than as a constructive process that it should be."

From reports of the meeting, Fearrey said county councillors were more concerned about how it would look if they reviewed spending and made changes. "I never thought anyone looked stupid by looking at things from another perspective. Many people think a 35 per cent increase doesn't make them look smart."

Fearrey also points out that one year it was the county demanding a budget be re-opened, only that time it was the board of education's.

"I remember sitting with many of these same members of county council, including the reeves of Stanhope, Monmouth, Glamorgan and Sherborne, who invited the Haliburton County Board of Education to a management meeting to explain and ask for a review of their budget with a 14 per cent increase."

The Echo asked Fearrey to say where he'd make cuts. Many of his points were small ones, such as a mileage increase to 31 cents during the Persian Gulf war and no subsequent reduction now that gas prices are lower. "That isn't a mandated cost and it isn't much but it's consistent with the type of con-

Promised unit not forgotten: DHC

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The District Health Council's proposal to build 40 long-term care beds in Haliburton County includes the previously promised 18 chronic care beds, says the Council's assistant executive director.

"There's a major shift in long-term care reform. It encompasses all the different types of beds," says Dawn Berry Mirriam, who worked on the steering committee's study on the county's healthcare needs.

The study was written using the terms familiar to the Ministry of Health, causing some initial negative reaction to the study's proposal. "The terminology has changed and that does confuse people. We're trying to make sure the language is consistent with government policy."

The terminology is supposed to encompass a new attitude towards delivery of healthcare services. Previously, different departments of institutions provided different nursing services, depending on a patient's needs. Some institutions, such as nursing homes, were not allowed to provide such services as chronic care.

Now, Mrs. Smith goes into bed in a hospital or nursing home, Berry Mirriam explains. If her condition worsens, the type of care she needs will increase. "She should have the right to stay in bed and the facility should be paid (for providing the extra services.)"

"The whole basis of funding would be based on care received." Because these changes are recent, the steering committee wanted to make sure they were reflected in the recommendations, she says.

The 10 proposed respite/con-ed to deal with the county's special needs because of geography and limited healthcare services. For instance, hospitals are now discharging patients earlier. That's fine for the patient who lives five minutes from the hospital and has the security of having nearby resources, but what about the person who lives two hours away in Haliburton? That person would not feel comfortable.

Respite beds are also for patients who need short-term care. Perhaps they're being taken care of by family, and the family needs to go away for a week. The respite can be as much for the patient as it is for the caregivers.

The steering committee feels 40 beds — 30 long-term and 10 respite/convallescent — are needed "but didn't feel they could make the judgement" on where the beds should be. Instead, the committee proposes four alternatives which will split the beds in different ratios between Haliburton and Minden. The proposal to build one large hospital on the Allsaw flats was included because it had been suggested.

But with the beds come other questions which need to be addressed, such as what infrastructure is available. Berry Mirriam was asked if the government would fund a hospital on the Allsaw flats if there was no sewer or water facilities. "Those very issues about services need to be addressed," she says.

Above all, she stressed, "It can't be perceived that it's a Minden/Haliburton split. We have to build on the strengths we have. We also have to work together."

"We have to create a win-win situation," says Marshall Elliott, the health council's executive director. He also encourages all municipalities work together for the betterment of Haliburton County, showing the province the people are united behind the need for beds.

He notes that in 1980, a District Health Council study recommended that 15 chronic care beds be built in Haliburton. There were also recommendations that beds be added in other communities. Norwood, Peterborough, Lindsay, Brighton, Campbellford and Hastings all have their recommended number of beds; Haliburton County still has none.

All three political parties have been in power during the 10 years Haliburton's needs have been identified, he adds.

Of all the recommended projects, "the only thing that's never been funded is beds for Haliburton County." This underlines the study's recommendation for 40 new long-term care beds. "We count too."

Concern over proposed beds

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Local reaction to the steering committee's recommendation that 40 long-term care beds be built in Haliburton County is cautiously optimistic.

But there's also concern over how and when the recommendations will be implemented.

"The need for the beds has once more been reinforced," says Barbara Dawson, chairperson of the fundraising drive for the earlier-proposed 18-bed chronic care unit, and a Haliburton representative on the steering committee.

"There were a lot of meetings and a lot of work went into it," she says of the large, informative document which encompasses almost 16 months of study and reports.

"It's done very thoroughly and I think some of the recommendations are great," says Jane Rosenberg, administrator of Extendicare, a private nursing home.

The study suggests making use of existing institutions and it's been banded about that some of the beds be added on to the Haliburton nursing home.

"In 1986, Extendicare did make a proposal to build the 20 chronic care beds onto Extendicare. We would be definitely interested in re-enacting that proposal," says Rosenberg, who contacted the national office for confirmation.

Extendicare already has some of the resources and would be willing to pay for the construction of the building. Provincial funding for the nursing services required and operational costs would have to be increased above the current level, however.

"The committee did an excellent job in addressing things beyond the 18 chronic care beds," says Dysart Reeve Bill Davis. However, the study provides no time frame for the construction of the 40 beds, nor guarantees that funding will be forthcoming. "That can be used as a tool to further delay implementation (of the recommendations.)"

He calls the report a "motherhood document," saying nice things about issues everyone agrees are important.

"I'm really anxious to see the timing of the commitments. Where's the timetable," says Dysart Councillor Murray Fearrey, who was also involved in the original campaign for the 18 beds. The architect's plans for that unit cost $400,000 and he wonders what will be done with them, and who will pay for them. Will the first beds built be at the Haliburton Hospital, where the first unit was supposed to be built? "These are political decisions."

If some chronic care beds are added to Hyland Crest, the county-owned nursing home, that will add to the burden of local taxpayers. The chronic care unit at Halibur-ton Hospital would have been funded 100 per cent by the Ministry of Health; the ministry only pays 75 per cent of the costs at Hyland Crest. There is also funding from the Ministry of Community and Social Services, but this year the county's portion of costs is budgeted at $415,000.

"It's certainly going to fall back on local taxpayers," Fearrey says.

"We just feel let down," says Carol Stamp, sister-in-law of the late Grenville Stamp, who became a rallying cry for the need of chronic care beds in Haliburton County. Injured in a car accident, he was a patient for years in Peterborough because there are no local facilities.

"Here's a study and we still have to study it," says Carol Stamp. The original need was a chronic care unit, but the steering committee's study also includes such things as housing and healthcare services in the home. "This isn't what we started out with. They made it into a massive study. I think they're asking for too much and the government is going to say no."

"We seem to have a lot of different services for a lot of people but the one service we don't have is chronic care beds. . . We've already thrown enough money away on all these plans and meetings. They shouldn't spend any more taxpayers' money. I think they should get on with it" and build the beds.

Right now, Stamp is more upset with the timing of the public meetings to discuss the study. Haliburton's meeting is from 4 to 7 p.m. on April

"When do they expect people to work?" asks Stamp. "I really trollable expenditures" which can be reduced. (County council blames mandated costs — welfare, children's aid, the health unit — for the large increase.)

There's a working fund provision of $20,000 which you normally increase, but in tough times it can be cut.

"It's agreed that transportation dollars are subsidized at 75 per have been made, even though we are told by the budget that provincial grants have been approved. In fact they have not been approved in writing and council continues to over-spend without any regard for the consequences if the province does not approve them in 1991." (See a related story elsewhere in The Echo.)

"Further, if the planning and development department would spend time developing the work management and I was there when the study was done to look at economic development and planning. But I was not there when the decision was made to implement it and in no way would support the method that's being used in the whole process."

Another process Fearrey questions is the use of the more than $200,000 set aside for the 18-bed chronic care unit. "I understand the funds are in a reserve fund but they appear nowhere in this budget document. However, I further understand that the interest is being used to offset borrowing. It's perhaps a legal question whether the funds are in a separate account or ear-marked as working funds."

"The reason I ask is that my suggestion was that since we had an economic slump in 1990 and uncontrollable social services costs, then perhaps $85,000 could have been used from the hospital expansion fund to reduce the 1990 deficit and the money returned when better economic times return, with no real burden on taxpayers."

"I have been told that that cannot be done and I would suggest that if that cannot be done, then neither can the interest off the money be spent to reduce borrowing and not appear anywhere on the financial statement."

Fearrey says he hasn't looked into the budgets of departments he knows little about, such as Hyland Crest. But there are guiding principles to follow, such as "if you don't have to buy a paper shredder when you're hard up, you don't."

"There's no such thing as can't if you have the will," he says of his attitude towards trimming the county's budget to a more affordable level. Dysart, which he represents as a municipal councillor, must pay 35 per cent of the county's levy. It has no option but to pay the levy; the municipality cannot withhold funds from the county.

'There's no attempt anywhere to zero-base budget,' Fearrey says of the county's efforts. 'It's an add-on budget - what you spent last year and add a bit.'

cent, with some supplementary funds. It does create work. However it can be cut and in a period of recession perhaps a five per cent increase would have been more fair than 10 per cent." The roads department budget is up to $872,440, from a budgeted $792,000 last year.

With the library increase of $24,000, $12,000 of which is attributable to pay equity, Fearrey says some of the projects could have been put on hold. And if costs are up because salaries are, you can trim by cutting an hour or two per library a week until the economy gets better.

"There's no attempt anywhere to zero-base budget. It's an add-on budget — what you spent last year and add a bit."

"The real area where expenditures are controllable is planning and development but because of an obvious error or misunderstanding, the planning and development expenditures are out of control."

"However, having said that I understand that certain staffs are in place and certain commitments they're able to complete here on the county official plan, then $67,4000 would not need to be spent this year on outside consultants."

As to the $25,000 contributed by the county for economic development, Fearrey says "the county will not suffer one loss in jobs if economic development were deferred by one year."

At Wednesday's meeting, it was said Fearrey was wrong to suggest the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology would postpone its 75 per cent of the funding for a year. Fearrey says he is willing to set up a conference call between him, a county representative and a ministry representative to prove it could be done.

Fearrey has been criticized for speaking out against planning and economic development because he sat on council when the departments were first approved. Fearrey resigned as Dysart reeve, and therefore as county councillor, on January 1, 1990.

"It is true I was on council when we decided to go ahead with waste don't think they want to hear what we want to say."

"They haven't changed my mind one iota," says Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis, another supporter of the chronic care unit. "I come from the school of integrity. When they make a promise, if they don't keep it, I'll hound them until they do. They have a strong obligation to carry through on their promise."

Davis suggests that "we still take our 18 beds and fly with it. If they want to build (a unit) in Minden, I'll be the first to donate $100."

Flood drops heroes into hot water

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Nice guys always finish last, especially if they're from Irondale.

Last week's flood will always be remembered by Burnt and Irondale River communities for the damage it caused. But for Don Dyson and Robert Hancock of Irondale, flood memories will include untangling lumber caught in the girders of the Irondale bridge and the OPP knocking on their doors, accusing them of stealing.

"The officer said he was investigating a theft," says Dyson, remembering the unforgettable visit two Saturdays ago. Hancock, his neighbour and friend, was out but the OPP left a note on his door. A neighbour was accusing the men of stealing lumber left in the yard of his cottage along the banks of the Irondale River.

"When he came up from the city on the Saturday and saw the logs sitting in front of my house, he couldn't believe the river came up that high and thought I stole them," says Dyson.

Dyson lives next to Irondale's Bailey bridge. As flood waters rose on Thursday, he saw that lumber had caught in the bridge's wooden girders, causing the river to overflow even more.

"I was a little concerned," he says. "The old Bailey bridge wouldn't be able to stand too much thrashing around."

With the help of Hancock and Snowdon Reeve George Simmons, the men spent hours freeing the tangled lumber, which they stored on dryer ground in Dyson's yard.

Wait and see

When the District Health Council's steering committee announced that Haliburton County should receive 40 new long-term care beds, one might have expected jubilation and enthusiasm from the people who have waited so long for such an announcement. Wasn't this more than the county had originally asked for? Wouldn't these beds better serve the needs of the county? Yet reaction was more along the lines of "We could have told you that two years ago." Or "We'll hold our applause until the beds are built."

Either the people of Haliburton County are extremely cynical, or there was something wrong with the process. In the first place, the steering committee could have prevented a lot of grumbling if the report had explained that long-term care beds did include the promised 18 chronic care beds. (It didn't help that the press conference announcing the results of a Haliburton County study was held in Peterborough, where the Council offices are. Remember the problems of transportation in Haliburton County?) Its members may be up to date on Ministry of Health lingo, but others have been too busy with their lives to notice the subtle changes. At first glance, the study said the 18-bed chronic care unit was necessary. A punch to the stomach would have felt better for those who have pinned their hopes on committee's commitment to do what's best for the sick and ailing of Haliburton County. Now it seemed they were just going to be disappointed again. If you don't get enthusiastic about something, you won't be disappointed if it doesn't bear fruit.

Perhaps The Echo could have done more to prepare people for the study's report. But, quite frankly, the monthly press conferences as the study was underway were boring. If the stories were dull to write, they must have been dull to read. "We heard some fascinating presentations" does not a fascinating story make. The report itself seems written by people who have been absorbed in this for months; it's not written to gently introduce people to what is, to the committee's credit, an exhaustive look at the county's present healthcare services and needs. One of the first rules of journalism is you tell people what they need to know in the simplest way possible.

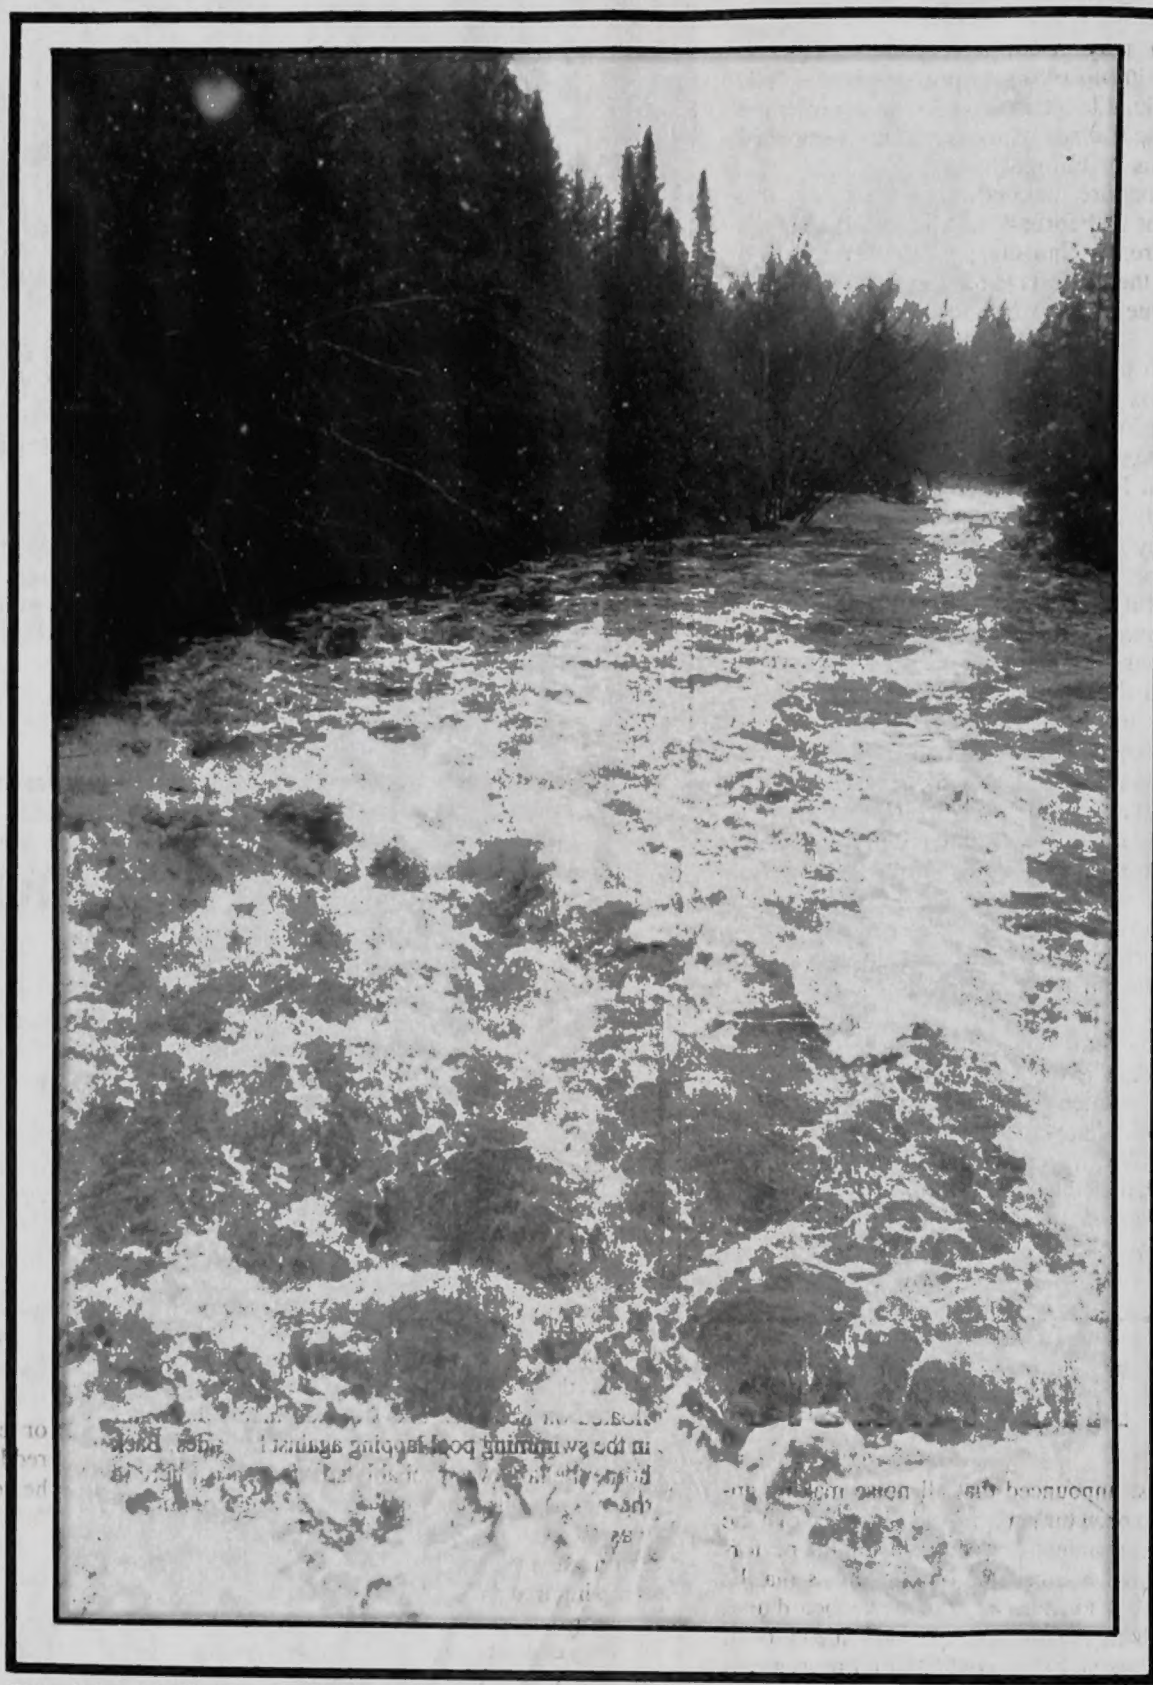

Underlying all this, however, is the realization that memories are long in Haliburton. Has anyone got rid of the anger they felt that night they filled the high school auditorium, only to have the health officials' backs turned towards them? Psychologically, this posture summed up people's perception of the ministry's attitude towards them. Nothing was ever done afterwards to assuage those hurt feelings, and whether they deserved the criticism or not, the steering committee was viewed as another instrument of the government which had spurned the wishes of the people.

The study also side-steps a potentially controversial problem: where to put the beds. It might be noble to say "Let the people decide", but it's the healthcare professionals who have a realistic idea of what will or won't be funded. Most people in Haliburton and Minden villages wish each other well and support each other's endeavours; those who have an us-versus-them agenda, however, tend to have the loudest voice. The county does not need division among its ranks when so much is at stake.

With a report which advocates that Haliburton finally gets its due, people should be willing to stand behind it. There may still be some justifiable quibbles, but for the most part, the report is supportive and understanding of the county's needs. People do want better healthcare services here, and are willing to help raise funds to get them. If the committee can enhance its image, people will learn to trust it.

Ultimately, however, it all boils down to one thing: money. Now is the time to write letters to the premier, minister of health and MPP Dennis Drainville. Let them know the people of Haliburton County care — and remember past promises.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

The recent uproar on the issue of taxation, and the spending of our tax dollars, at a county level are reminiscent of how the GST, and the Meech Lake accord were presented to the Canadian people.

The message was clear. This is the Legislation, because we, your elected representatives, know what is best for you. This message funnels down from Ottawa to Queen's Park, to County Council, to our own Township councils.

There has been enough opposition presented to County Council to allow for a revision.

Perhaps, if the budget were drawn up first, and presented at an open forum, all taxpayers and business groups would have the opportunity for useful input before the final draft. Further more, council members could explain and defend their position before hand, rather than in the newspapers after the fact.

The same principle could apply to Minden's Council for its budget, or any issue that might affect the welfare of the townships it represents.

To extend this further, what about the proposed provincial car insurance program? Do we really need a new system, or is the one we have adequate? None of us really know which is best until we have the facts from the government, once the private insurance industry, with a possible televised debate. An issue such as this should be resolved by an open forum, followed by a referendum vote.

The same could be said for the educational levy. Because this represents an expenditure of our tax dollars, the proposed budget should be presented openly and beforehand and voted on by all taxpayers at the county level. This concept is done in the U.S.A. and works well.

For a government to be truly democratic (yes, there are a few) the voting and taxpaying public is entitled to freedom of information through forums and open meetings in which they are allowed input, or allowed to exercise their franchise.

This should start at the townships of Anson, Hinds & Minden followed by County Council.

John A. Purc, Bsc. D.D.S.,
Minden, Ontario.

Budget hurts us all

To the Editor:

I have read the pros and cons of the County Council request for a 35 percent hike in their share of the Municipal taxes. I wonder how much longer people are going to expect that wages must automatically be raised every year making the cost of everything also raise every year? It's a vicious cycle that must be stopped.

I am a senior citizen so have lived through a Depression, war years with shortages, good and bad economic times. I have had the experience of being an employee, employer and am now on the Government payroll (isn't that a neat title for Old Age Security).

I think it is time that County Council and all people who are paid by tax dollars take a hard look at what is happening. It would be interesting to know how many people in the county are dependant on the tax dollar for their salaries and wages, from all levels of government. In Haliburton the County tax base is probably close to 75 percent paid by people in the following three categories: Senior citizen, small businessmen and women including the self-employed, and the cottage owner.

The senior citizen in Ontario is well treated, however, I would like to remind you that our government pensions increased by approximately 4 percent per year (the raise of the cost of living). If we were wise enough to have saved some money during our working years and invested it, it is not indexed.

The small businessman and woman has no Unemployment Insurance; they must pay half the share of his employee's U.I.C., half the share of

THE ROTARY CLUB of Haliburton is hosting a "Past Rotarian Night" on Thursday, May 2 at Wig-A-Mog Inn. This will be an informal get together featuring a social hour, beef barbecue (barbecued to perfection by our own rotarian chefs), a guest speaker and plenty of time to reminisce. Interest seems to be running high for this evening and many former rotarians have indicated to me that they plan to attend. There should be a big turnout for his fun night when it will give everyone the opportunity to renew old acquaintances.

Special guest comedian Gary Colwell, known as the "Man of a thousand Sounds", will be present when Club 707 and West Guilford Youth Group meet at the J. Douglas Hodgson Senior Elementary School Gym on Saturday, April 27 from 7:07 to 9:30 p.m. There will be free snacks, comedy, games and an award winning video.

If you enjoy a good fashion show you won't want to miss Fashions '91 which will be presented by The Village Shoppe and Country Pickin's at the PineStone Inn and Country Club on Friday, May 3 in the Grand Ballroom. Special attractions include Faye's Bridal Salon with floral designs by Country Rose. A special pre-show buffet has been lined up and you should phone PineStone Inn 457-1800 for reservations. The doors will open at 7:30 p.m. and show time is scheduled for 8:00 p.m. This year's proceeds will go to the Heart and Stroke Foundation. Advance tickets are on sale at the Village Shoppe and Country Pickin's.

The April edition of the Kennis Lake Cottage Owners Association Newsletter reports that John Lane, Manager of Minden Area Ontario Hydro spoke at the annual meeting about the planned updating and improvement in the hydro facilities on the lake. They have waited almost 10 years for this to occur. The members of the Association claim that they still have to wait, but in the meantime, Hydro will start a project this spring to improve the supply line from Eagle Lake to the new transformer station. Several poles and the wires from the new transformer station to the Marina at Kennis Lake, will be replaced.

The village of Tara, in the heart of Bruce County, kindly invites all former resident sand their friends back for a three day Homecoming, August 2, 3 and 4. There will be parades, dances and games, as well as a lot of reminiscing. For information please write the Tara Homecoming Committee, Box 128, Tara, Ontario N0H 2N0.

My faith in human nature is always restored when I see people cleaning up the debris along the river bank or along the streets in Haliburton. I was driving home from Minden a week ago when I noticed several people picking up the litter which had been thrown from car windows during the winter months. We must stop people from throwing their litter, here, there and everywhere if we want to continue to live on this planet. There's still a great deal to be done and we hope that the local council will step in and see to it that the clean-up job is completed.

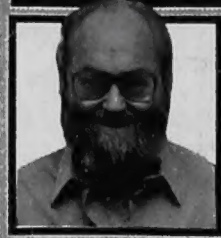

Last week I reported that the United Church women will be holding their 3rd annual Spring Luncheon and Bake Sale. When the paper hit the streets the date was missing. This week we would like to inform you that it's on this Wednesday, April 24 at the Haliburton United Church. The time is 11:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

The ice went out of Head Lake at Haliburton on Friday, April 19. In 1988 it was out by April 14 and in 1989 it didn't go out until well after April 20. There is no doubt about the fact that winters are milder than they used to be.

POINTS OF VIEW

Barbie, baptism and cable TV

AS HAS HAPPENED so often before when I write a column, things come up right afterwards that would have been included if the item had been around a week or even a day sooner.

For instance, I had no sooner passed the item about Barbie along to the paper a few weeks ago, when I saw a TV item about the very first commercial for her. Seems she didn't really take off until she was featured in TV spots on the Mickey Mouse Club — just before Christmas of 1959.

That same week, I came across an article on Kitty Perkins, the designer responsible for the team that comes up with over 100 new outfits each year for Mattel's little moneyspinner. Not that all the clothes are designed by the company — international dress designer Oscar de la Renta and even Canada's Wayne Clark have done gowns for her.

I had forgotten that she had bobbed hair and pillbox hats in the Jackie Kennedy '60s. And I didn't know that they had introduced Francine as a mod — and flat-chested cousin — in the Twiggy era, nor wanting to alter Barbie's hourglass figure.

Nor did I realize that her boyfriend doll Ken sort of 'disappeared' in 1968, because Mattel didn't want to explain what he was doing during the Viet Nam war. (Some tabloid magazines apparently spread rumors he had taken off to Canada).

When he came back, he had a bushy, Beatles-style haircut, which by 1976 had grown down past his shoulders. There was even a Peek-A-Boo Ken: when you pulled down his tiny swim trunks, you could see his tiny tan line.

Barbie and her friends now come in white, black, Oriental and Hispanic versions, and are sold in 67 countries. She can dress up as a Mountie, a ballerina or a stewardess, and was briefly an astronaut — until the space shuttle Challenger exploded. Currently she'll be appearing in stores on military bases in the uniform dress of the appropriate service.

And I'm not sure if it is part of the continuing water shortage problem in California I wrote about, or just their unique approach to things out there, but the latest trend for Baptists, at least, is baptism in hot tubs.

Members of the New Song Church, dubbed 'the flock that likes to rock,' dip 'em 30 at a time at a hot tub resort near Los Angeles. Seems to work: they draw 1,000 to most Sunday services, with the average age of the congregation at 27 — and single.

And you may recall a reference to 'U.S. English,' a group trying to preserve English as the only official language in the U.S. They're the ones that use Canada as the horrible example of the problems of bilingualism.

These folks are making a lot of hay out of a development in February in Florida. It seems a bunch of French Canadians have been branded outlaws for their efforts to not only preserve their native tongue, but to import it for the winter season.

Seems our countrymen have taken over 120 of the 234 sites at Pembroke Park Lake Mobile Homes near Fort Lauderdale, but were unable to convince the park owners or the local cable system to provide a French-speaking service.

Apparently a Quebec company was willing to beam hockey games, Quebecois news and dubbed soap operas via satellite, and when they couldn't get it legally, these winter visitors took the matter into their own hands.

Despite warnings from the mayor, a gun-toting deputy, and the park manager, groups of men snuck about in the dark with spades and buried over 2,000 feet of TV cable five inches under the soil for transmission of the Quebecois system.

It all came to a head when two residents complained. A bylaw officer came around to charge them, but he says "They just put their hands up in the air and say 'No speak the English.' Nobody seems to know anything about it."

And a short item that overlaps columns on the shortage of facilities for women and the problems with railway trains came from Australia the other day. Seems there are no facilities for the 90-minute run from Sydney to the steel town of Wollongong.

When five women pleaded with the train driver, he stopped at Waterfall station and let them out to use the facilities. After a couple of minutes he blew a warning whistle and took off — leaving one lady in the stall, and another still waiting!

Fortunately, there was another train, 20 minutes later.

Learning to golf not made easy

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

THE PALM TREES gently rustled, their tops lazily stroked by the wind, causing them to sway easily against the sky. She floated on her back and watched them, the water in the swimming pool lapping against her sides. Back home the lake was probably still frozen but here in the sunny south, the major concern of the moment was the amount of chlorine in the pool. Holidays can make a person so lazy, she thought to herself, realizing that to leave the pool for breakfast seemed more effort than she could muster.

Birds called to each other from across manicured lawns that were punctuated with brilliant flowers and shrubs. She and her husband slurped their juicy grapefruits. It was time to plan the day. Momentous decisions must be made. To go to the ocean or over the border; explore another shopping mall or the back streets of this palm-studded city; there were so many choices. Then she remembered a promise made to herself the previous year. It had been to learn to play golf.

At first her husband was less than enthusiastic. A former golfer himself, he had spent many frustrating hours trying to whack a stubborn little ball over a spiteful golf course. However, they had passed a driving range on their way home the day before and decided to start her introduction to the game there.

While her friends back in Canada were hunkered down in their jackets, pulling up collars against Haliburton's cold north wind, she was donning shorts and sunglasses. Any sadness for her fellow northerners was tempered with the knowledge that in fact she was merely getting a head-start on her golf education. She was certain they would appreciate her thoughtfulness in wanting to finally join them on the golf course come the summer season. Whistling an off-key tune, she headed out.

Although early for a Sunday morning there were already five other people determinedly hitting ball after ball out into a large, flat field. Big numbered signs, stating the distance achieved, mocked their attempts as most balls fell short of all but the first sign. Her husband deposited a wire basket of golf balls at her feet and the lesson began.

He showed her how to grip the club, saying it was probably the most uncomfortable position anyone had ever devised for two hands. She decided he was right. The stance was next and it also felt stiff and unnatural. Finally, the swing. At first she couldn't see how it was possible to swing at all. Her hands were cramped and intertwined around the club's handle, her pigeon-toed feet held in place by stiffly spaced legs, a bent back and arms that were frozen into position.

She looked at her husband in disbelief. He wanted her to what?

He wanted her to swing both arms back, sort of like getting ready for the pitch at home base, and then swing down to hit the little white ball off its little white perch and not look to see where she had hit it. She laughed. He was serious. A few practice swings were in order. They helped her to relax a thousandth of what she should. Then she started.

It went better than she had expected. On her third swing she experienced beginner's luck, that twist of fate that gives every rank amateur a brief taste of how success feels. It's just enough to wet the appetite for more and carry the poor fools over the rough spots of learning a new game. Never having handled a golf club before, she was using different muscles than usual and so would pause every so often to give them a rest.

She used this time to look over her fellow 'drivers'. One poor fellow had not had the benefit of any instruction at all and it showed as the ball continued to fly wildly in every direction. Another man, reeking of after-shave and colour-coordinated in green clothing, was consistently lobbing the ball smoothly toward the farthest sign. Her own husband was having less luck.

At a glance she saw that he was not following his own advice to her as he consistently attacked the ball, swinging too hard and sending it a feeble six or ten inches from the tee. His face was starting to redden when he felt fiercer eyes on him. Looking up, he reminded her that there had been good reason for his abandoning golf years before.

Dealing with frustration seemed to be the major task. While her lesson had proceeded, one young man had arrived beside her and began practising. His efforts must have proven less than satisfactory for in a short time they turned around to see he had already left, leaving half a basket of unused balls.

After hitting or almost hitting two full baskets of golf balls, her wrists and arms were getting sore so she shook her head when asked if she wanted to continue. She had had enough for the day. When her husband asked if, having now had a taste of the game, she might be interested in playing sometime, she couldn't answer. The driving range had been rather boring. There had to be more to the game.

However, it had been hot and dry on the driving range and right now they were both eager to return to the pool. As she walked by the living room on her way to meet her husband poolside, her father-in-law was watching professional golf on the TV. Now that she knew a little more about the game than she had the day before, she stopped for a minute to watch.

The golfer was trying to sink a putt. He was tied for the lead at this point and a lot of money was riding on the match. The distance to the hole was not far. Crouching down, the player studied the angle and slope of the ground. After adjusting his position several times and limbering his wrists and elbows, he softly touched the ball. It glided up to the hole and then, inexplicably, skirted it, coming to rest just beyond. The crowd groaned in unison. The man's head slumped down.

However the face he showed to the camera was philosophical if disappointed and the game continued. She shook her head and walked down to the pool. If someone who made their living playing golf could blow a shot like that, what chance of mastering the game did she have?

Once more adrift on her back, looking up at the swaying palm trees, she contemplated the golf dilemma. Frustration at even the top level of play, yet some people played it all their lives, planning trips and even their day's routine around the game. Why? Then she thought of the professional golfer on TV.

Maybe life was like a game of golf. Ultimately we all failed or succeeded based on our own individual efforts. At the last minute fate could always step in and alter out most careful plans. When this happened, there was nothing we could do to change things. We just had to continue.

Genius a slave to his music

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

WE WENT TO THE Anton Kuerti concert last Sunday evening. It was a study in psychology. He was marvelous, of course. Exciting, compelling and all the positive, star-like adjectives apply. He also had one tiny little quirk. He demanded total silence during his performance.

Now, I can understand his position. And he's asking it for his audience as well as himself. After all, when you listen to special music at home, don't you like to kind of sit back, close your eyes and really get into it? With no interruptions?

Anton certainly 'got into it.' He sat down at the piano, closed his eyes, and took a few cleansing breaths, waiting for absolute silence in the audience before he played a note. When he began, his fingers instantly united with the keys. You could almost see him climb into, and become one with the strings. His face became rather rosy, and took on a rapturous expression.

That is, until someone coughed. Whereupon, his eyes flew open, as well as his mouth. He may have whispered, "Fie!" or "Bah!" or some such thing. He seemed hurt that anyone would have the affrontery to break his magic spell. And yet he never missed a beat or muffed a note.

Herein lies the psychology. The power of suggestion. In her introduction, Ruth, the Mistress of Ceremonies, announced that all noise making appliances had been turned off. And she asked that the audience be as quiet as possible during the performance. So when it became obvious to us that he wasn't going to touch a finger to the keyboard until we met with his request, a deep hush settled around us. People learned they couldn't fold a program, close a purse, or whisper to their neighbor. And, don't you just know that certain poor folks who hadn't coughed in weeks suddenly developed terrible tickles in their throats?

There soon developed a routine of the most careful throat clearing during pianissimo interludes. People were definitely listening closely to establish the melody and time a place of fortissimo (fortunately there were many) where they could COUGH, COUGH, COUGH to a strident beat rather like a cymbal clash.

But the grimaces on Anton's face let us all know, he was aware of what we were up to. Back to softer strains, while people choking back a throat spasm tried in vain to soundlessly unwrap a lozenge that had been passed to them.

We all tried so hard, but it was bound to catch up to us. After the familiar melody of Beethoven's 'Moonlight Sonata' finished, and the next movement began in still more soft, sweet strains, some poor soul let loose a deep and desperate cough that literally stopped the music.

It wasn't funny for the cougher, who must have been embarrassed beyond words. And I think the audience lost some of their enthusiasm for the artist when he, ever so tactfully, invited the cougher to leave.

There is a solution to the problem. Dear Anton, the next time you perform your melodious music, may I suggest that for some degree of assurance that your concentration be undisturbed, simply arrange for a cough drop concession at the door.

Surviving the budget storm

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

by: SHAWN HAGERMAN

IT CERTAINLY HAS been a tumultuous time ever since County council slashed its support for County promotion. The emergency general meeting of all Chamber Members on April 11 brought out many more members than that had attended a number of our annual meetings. The Legion Hall was filled by a broad spectrum of business people, resorts, owners and individuals from all parts of our County.

Their questions showed that they were concerned not only about the Chamber's future direction, but as the evening went on many questioned again and again the County's new direction with its new economic development officer and that department's new responsibility to promote our County. A motion by Ken Langdon that passed by an overwhelming majority, (the one dissenter called for full restoration of our funding), asked that the county lift its restrictions on how the Chamber spends the funds and contained an appeal for $18,000 additional funds from the County. This motion has brought mixed results. Mercifully, the county has agreed to lift its restrictions, but denied the $18,000 that would have helped pay for our second staff. This leaves the Chamber able to open its doors, but makes promotion outside the County difficult.

Before, during and after the meeting, the most encouraging aspects of this affair have been the spon-

Bantams collect trash for funds

by BRIAN RODNICK

To show their gratitude and to make a little money at the same time, Haliburton's championship OMHA Bantams will pick up garbage.

Over the next three Saturdays, the team will head out in trucks and clear away any beer bottles, cans or trash they find lying at the side of the local highways.

"Let's face it, there isn't a lot of fundraising that can be made from this," says their coach John Mackenzie. "The boys just really want to thank the community for their support."

The trash will be taken to the dump, but bottles and cans will be bagged and turned in for deposits. While on the road, team members might also knock on doors asking people to donate any empty beer bottles to the cause.

Wet weather last Saturday forced the team to cancel their first trip out, but rain or shine they will be at come this Saturday.

Any funds raised will go towards purchasing each member a commemorative plaque of this year's success. Each one contains a team picture and an individual portrait of each player along side it.

Hockey team revels in winning season

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

GOOD TEAM SPIRIT is often credited for allowing a team to win the big game. While this may not be always be the case, it is without a doubt true for Haliburton's OMHA Bantams.

Still riding high from winning the All Ontario C Championship three weeks ago, the team is only now beginning to realize the scope of its accomplishment. For most this marks the third year in a row that they've taken an All Ontario title, first as PeeWees and now as Bantams.

"This is the year that's put us in history," says Mark Morrisette, the Bantam's left wing. The other players surrounding him quickly nod in agreement.

"It's good team work of course," says Centre Jonathan Bishop, trying to keep a straight face. "And talent," adds Mark, smiling. Automatically the rest of the team is in on the joke, and right away you realize it's this mutual admiration and camaraderie behind any success the group has had over the last three years. But plain hard work has always helped.

"There's nothing like playing hockey seven days a week," says Right Defense Jeff Black. "Practise is our life," adds Mark.

Although practise makes perfect, coach MacKenzie has his own theory. "Once in awhile you get a group of boys who are naturally better, and when you get three or four on the same team, that really gives the whole team a boost," he says. "But these boys are pretty competitive. One taste of a championship and they want more."

Despite their success and regardless of how badly they would like to pursue a career in hockey, most realize this likely won't happen. "I'd like to do it for a living but I've got to be realistic," says Left Wing Mike MacKenzie.

Most are planning on going to university, while others have their own ideas. "I'm going inherit my dad's business and retire," jokes Jeff. But that doesn't stop them or even their parents from dreaming.

"It's every child's dream to one day play in the NHL, since the first time they strap on a pair of skates," says Phyllis Bishop, hockey mom and avid supporter of the Bantams. Both she and husband Dave acted as assistant managers this season, keeping tabs on the finances and making travelling arrangements.

After years of involvement in minor hockey Mr. Bishop is more than pleased by the Bantams' success. To reach this plateau he says the team had two things going for it: innate talent and good coaching.

"In coaching you set goals at the beginning of the year, and the rest of the year is designed to go for those goals, win or lose. Drive will usually achieve it."

While this may be true, Haliburton Minor Hockey Association president Bryan Foster believes something more than this has been at work in Haliburton this hockey season. "It also takes an abundance of heart," he says. "There is definitely a lot of heart up here in minor hockey."

He credits the outpouring of community support this year as one of the reasons Haliburton managed to bring home five championships. To put something back into the community, the OMHA Bantams will be running a clean-up campaign over the next three Saturdays (see accompanying story).

But as with anything, all good things must come to an end and next season will see the present Bantams break apart. The second years will move on to the Midgets, while the first move up to second. For those who've skated side by side for the last three or four years, taking that last game against Hagersville was especially satisfying.

"Most of us knew it would be our last shot," says Centre Greg Stamp. The rest of the team agreed they played harder this year than ever before.

But don't count the Bantams out just yet, they warn. After all next year there is another hockey season.

Correction

Jon Hebert and Rene Gagnon were inadvertently left out of the list of PeeWee players who captured the All-Ontario Championship. Their contribution was valued and The Echo regrets any misunderstanding this may have caused.

HUGHES TROPHY: Some familiar faces were at the Haliburton Legion. The Men's schedule winners were David Foster, Art Dawson, Geoff Ainsley, receiving trophy from Jon Lansdowne. Absent was Terry Lloyd.

Retailers keep close eye on the economy

still have two weeks left to go," she says. But unlike other retailers, Pritchard says business was good throughout February and March.

"We were busy January 1 with people buying before the GST, then it slowed down for about six weeks," says Brad Sales of Cordell Carpets and Interiors in Haliburton. "It picked up in mid-February and since then it's been steady." However it still doesn't compare to the way business was at this time two years ago.

But signs of any boost during a recession has kept some retailers optimistic. "Business has definitely picked up in the last few weeks," says Connie Robinson of The Finishing Touch Boutique in Haliburton. From listening to the media reports she expected the situation to be much worse. "They preached nothing but doom and gloom."

Reports in the media has also had others questioning on how grave Canada's economy really is. "Listening to the news I tend to believe the recession is media made, or almost encouraged," says Pritchard. She also believes many of the people who cross the border to shop in the United States choose to do so after listening to constant media reports on the subject.

Shopping locally is one way which National Consumer Week hopes to promote a "stronger" marketplace, a method which local businesses are more than aware.

"I know myself that to buy for certain family members I would have to go out town to shop, but not anymore," says Kim Cowen, manager of Highland Images in Haliburton. As a manager she spends a great deal of time choosing her inventory and has found variety to be the key.

"If somebody wants a particular item, I'm open to suggestions. It's the consumer who makes it go," she says.

Her feelings are shared by Sheila Burke, one of Home Town Fashions' new owners in Haliburton. "The local people have been really good. Now there's a variety of stores and people are able to get more stuff they need without leaving town."

Like other businesses, Burke says sales have picked up over the last few weeks as people begin to spend more. At the same time consumers are keeping a close eye on their pennies.

"On the whole people are still going to buy the things they want," says Cowen. "Someone is still going to have that 40th birthday party and will still get a present. But instead of buying that fifty-dollar item, they're going to make it a twenty-five dollar item."

"People are definitely shopping around more," says Nadine Bull of Canac Kitchen Design Studios, adding that's to be expected when buying a big ticket item.

But despite the recession and a slow winter, Bull has managed to sell 20 kitchens, compared to 28 last year. "This isn't going to be as good as other springs, but people are becoming more enthusiastic." More people are walking through her showroom because renovation is the more cost efficient way to upgrade their home or cottage. Regardless of conflicting reports of signs of economic improvement, some businesses have taken a "only time will tell" attitude.

"Things can't get stronger until we get over this recession," says Halco Electronics owner Lon Duncombe. He finds the government's promotion of strengthening the economy ironic.

"To them to suggest such a thing is like rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic. It's their bureaucracy that's stifling small businesses," he says, referring to the Goods and Services Tax.

Like Bull, Duncombe has experienced an increase in customers through his store; unfortunately, he says, they aren't buying. "My prices are the same as they are in Toronto, Halifax or Vancouver. It's just too tempting for people to go south," he says, adding many of the big ticket items brought in for repair have been purchased in the U.S.

"Certainly people from the States won't come this year, they'd be crazy to come north, everything is double than in the states."

Store owners agree this year's cottage season will provide a much needed economic boost.

"Whatever happens with economy people are still going to show up at their cottages," says Cowen. "It's the only relief they have."

"Now there are a variety of stores and people are able to get more stuff they need without leaving town," says Sheila Burke at Home Town Fashions on shopping locally.

The Corporation of the Township of Sherborne, McClintock, Livingstone, Lawrence and Nightingale

PUBLIC NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Municipal Corporation of the Township of Sherborne, McClintock, Livingstone, Lawrence and Nightingale proposes to enact a By-law to stop-up, close and sell that part of the 66-foot original shore road allowance set out and described as follows:

In the Township of McClintock, County of Haliburton, being part of the 66-foot original shore road allowance lying in front of Lot 6, Concession 1, Township of McClintock, designated as Parts 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 on Plan 19R-4900.

The proposed By-law will come before the said Council for consideration at its regular meeting at the Council Chambers, Municipal Building, Main Street, Dorset, Ontario, on the 6th day of May, 1991, at the hour of 1:00 o'clock p.m. and at that time the Council will hear any person or by his Counsel, Solicitor or Agent any person who claims that his land will be prejudicially affected and who applies to be heard.

DATED: April 3rd, 1991.

Diane J. Griffin,
Clerk-Treasurer,
Corporation of the Township of Sherborne, McClintock,
Livingstone, Lawrence and Nightingale

This original shore road allowance is located in front of Lot 6, Concession 1, Township of McClintock, along the shore of Tock Lake (also known as Otter Lake) and upon being closed and stopped up will be sold to owners of land abutting: Part 1 - Leonard Francis Farmer and Rosemarie Farmer; Part 2 - Edward Sage and Lois Helen Sage; Part 3 - Peter Emile Cook. Part 4 & 5 - Ministry of Natural Resources.

The neverending garbage battle

Local residents and what's left behind

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Haliburtonians, you create a lot of garbage.

Every year, the average household contributes this much recyclable waste to the local landfill sites: 50 pounds of newspaper, 35 pounds of glass, 12 pounds of steel, one pound of aluminum, half a pound of P.E.T. pop bottles, six pounds of mixed plastic and 15 pounds of old corrugated cardboard.

With 1,500 permanent resident households and 4,400 seasonal resident households, that adds up to an unpeddled strain on our landfill resources. Altogether, these people dump 353 tons of garbage which could be recycled and remade into other products.

It makes sense to recover these materials, says Muskoka Containerized Services in a report presented to Dysart council. Dysart could earn $207.50 a year by selling its recovered recyclables. That might not go a long way in paying the $26,453 cost of a implementing a recycling program, but it will save Dysart money in the long run by making the landfill sites last a lot longer.

MCS is recommending a "blue box" program because blue boxes "increase the participation and capture rates at depots." People would be given a blue box, which has compartments for different kinds of recyclable materials, fill the box at home and bring it to the dump with the rest of their garbage.

With Option 1, the municipality would rent the 40-cubic-yard depots; with Option 2, it would purchase them. The municipality would also pay for 6,400 blue boxes, although there is a grant of $12,800 available to defray some costs. If it follows Option 2, there's also a $13,833 grant.

Whatever option it follows some costs will be the same: wages, $11,000; benefits, $2,000; professional services, $1,000; container rentals, $11,000 or $3,700; telephone, $1,800; transportation $12,000; advertising $4,000; and capital, either $38,400 or $79,900.

Blue boxes increase the participation and capture rates at depot.

With the grants available from the province and the recycling association, Option 1 would cost $26,453 the first year, and Option 2 would cost $36,637. Option 2 would cost less in subsequent years.

The numbers are based on 1990 population figures, and typical amounts of waste produced by rural residents. It's thought fewer people receive daily newspapers, so that number was reduced.

In selling the recycled materials, glass, steel and aluminum would make a profit of more than $1,000 each, but it would cost the municipality $3,700 to get rid of the newspapers.

"Every bit of it will be sold and made into other products," says Iain Waters, manager of recycling services for MCS in a telephone interview. Despite some news reports which give the impression no one wants the recyclable materials, he says the markets are there.

"Every bit of material (MCS collected in Muskoka) went out as a sale," he says. "We make sure we collect materials we can sell. During the recent strike (at a sorting station) we could have exported twice as much as we had but it wasn't worth that much.

Many of the bad impressions spring from Toronto's mishandling of sorting the garbage, Waters says. "Everyone else does things right and Metro doesn't understand how to do it."

Council has yet to adopt and implement the report. A decision should be made by the next council meeting in May.

GARBAGE, GARBAGE EVERYWHERE: At least some of it is going to be re-used. A new plan by Muskoka Containerized Services for Dysart would help find a new home for newspapers, glass and cans. It's a start.

Play it again, please, Kaleidoscope Theatre

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IF CHILDREN ACTED UP with as much frenetic energy and enthusiasm as displayed by Kaleidoscope Theatre, their parents would say "Stop acting so silly and clean your room." Luckily, Beth Burton, Michael Pearce, Don Noble and Cathy DeGrosbois did not bring their parents along when they left British Columbia to perform at the Haliburton high school on Sunday.

But even though there were lots of parents at the concert, not one of them dared scold the lively performers. They were too busy laughing.

Who would want to contain the zany antics of this talented troupe anyway? When kids act silly and rambunctious, they get yelled at; when Kaleidoscope does, they get paid for it.

Kaleidoscope's true talent was making children believe in what they did not see. Beth Burton takes a step outside her imaginary house, slips on something underfoot, and marvels that her new possessions include a cow. "Look out, it's fresh," she warns her husband as he approaches. Everyone laughs, knowing what she is talking about without having to be told. Imagination paints a more colourful — and less odoriferous — picture than props ever could.

In the same story, her husband goes out fishing. The great expanse of the Atlantic Ocean is condensed into a large, white, billowing, parachute-like blanket which undulates across the gym floor as if the wind was a friendly playmate. Suddenly, from the ocean's depth springs a magical fish. In return for being set free, it promises to fulfill the fisherman's wish.

Being a simple man, the fisherman is just happy to let the fish go. His wife, however, has other plans. First she asks, then demands, that the fish make them richer and richer and richer. Happiness erodes under the steady pounding of greed and eventually the couple is left with nothing. But they have each other, they realize, and kiss. "Yuck,

Children were enraptured by the zany antics which they'd be yelled at for trying.

ewwwwww," the children, male ones especially, respond.

Pearce and Noble must have driven their mothers crazy, but as performers, their incredible vitality was put to good use in the story about how the raccoon got its mask. (Steve Heming of Camp Wanakita says they must have gone to camp when they were young.) Portraying two competitive native warriors, they tussle and race and run miles without moving three metres ahead. Movements are exaggerated, but with such honesty that even the adults are beguiled, albeit exhausted just watching them.

Burton joins them in several different guises, a pixie-like chameleon who can command the formidable authority of the spirit of the moon, devilishly play tricks as a young raccoon, or be the bestest six-year-old hockey player — whoosh, whoosh, watch the puck, she scores!!! — this universe has ever seen.

It's as an ensemble they work best, with DeGrosbois quietly helping the performance slide along in a cohesive fashion. After the opening two skits, Burton, Pearce and Noble play a word game, which the adults in the crowd seemed to enjoy more than the children, sensing the subtleties of the game, and how one performer deliberately tries to make things difficult for the next.

Playing on the same theme, Kaleidoscope then asked the audience for an emotion. "Happy." An activity? "Playing Nintendo." Now they had to act out a skit which included happiness and playing Nintendo. Instead of one word at a time, they did it one image at a time, taking the story along a whacky, funny, intelligent, and never-out-of-control path, which had a surprise around every corner.

There's a boy. He has no bones in his legs. (See Kaleidoscope wriggle and writhe. See the audience laugh.) No one lets him play baseball. He cries, cries, cries, big, wet, lovely tears. Mom makes him macaroni and cheese with lots of ketchup. She gives him a Nintendo. Wow. He stuffs his face with macaroni and plays Nintendo. A miracle occurs. Using the joystick to make Mario Brothers move makes his arm really strong. He picks up a baseball. And throws it through the basement wall. Gee whiz. Now everyone wants him on the baseball team. They become the best baseball team in the world. Called the Toronto Maple Leafs. Whoooooops.

The show ended by Kaleidoscope taking a very simple song — Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star — and turning it on its feet. This Twinkle knows how to rumba, bee-boop, belt out the blues and find the sixties' meaning of reality. Kaleidoscope was copacetic.

To its credit, Kaleidoscope never talked down to children, never used children-talk. If the children didn't understand something, the action was fast enough to pull them along to next point of the story. Meanwhile, the parents were having fun, too, laughing so hard their children were tempted to say "Shhh, stop acting so silly." Maybe grownups do recognize the value of a little silliness, now and again — and come back again, please, Kaleidoscope.

With a minimum of props but a whole lot of enthusiasm and energy, Kaleidoscope Theatre delighted local children (and adults) on Sunday, above. The troupe from Victoria, British Columbia might have been acting silly, but that's what the fun was all about.

Drainville ready to fight for county's healthcare needs

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

MPP Dennis Drainville is glad he now has the ammunition to fight for Haliburton County's chronic care needs.

"We've been kicked around and kicked around for long enough," Drainville said in a telephone interview Friday. "I'm not happy that for the last decade, we've had to beg the government to respond to our needs in Haliburton."

But now when he asks the Ministry of Health to address the county's healthcare needs, he has the findings of the recent study by the District Health Council steering committee. It recommends that instead of getting the 18-bed chronic care unit promised by the previous Liberal government, the new NDP government should fund 40 additional beds.

"Here we have a plan which is not only a comprehensive look (at Haliburton's needs) but which is also a plan of appropriate action," the NDP politician says. "It gives us the ammunition with which to go to the ministry."

Drainville is very pleased with the committee's work. It has gathered sufficient data to prove

"we are a very different county and our needs are pre-eminent."

Asked whether the study will be followed by a renewed commitment by the government to fund the 40 beds, "I would say the government would be very foolish not to support it with the funds that are needed."

"The key issue is to get funds and I see it as my role to advocate on behalf of the county."

In last September's election campaign, both Drainville and now-Premier Bob Rae promised that Haliburton County would get the beds promised in 1985 by the province. After the county had raised its share of the funds, and $400,000 had been spent on architect's plans, then-Health Minister Elinor Caplan would not give approval for construction. Instead, she said the steering committee would investigate the county's needs, taking into consideration new ministry policies about keeping people in their homes for as long as possible.

The committee presented its report two weeks ago. It noted that no other county has no chronic care beds, even though we have the highest percentage of senior citizens in the province.

Unfortunately, on Thursday Health Minister Evelyn Gigantes resigned because she inadvertently mentioned the name of drug rehabilitation patient during Question Period. This is a clear breach of confidentiality, both she and the government acknowledged.

"She's really done the honourable thing," says Drainville, who's also chairman of the NDP caucus. He described Gigantes as "a woman full of integrity, with many abilities."

Gigantes' resignation "does present some problems (for implementation of the steering committee's report) in that you have a new minister," Drainville says. In the past months, he's been diligently briefing Gigantes on Haliburton County's needs and he'll have to begin all over again with her replacement. "We've got a couple more hoops to jump."

Solder checked for safety reasons

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Lead solder in copper pipes should be a thing of the past once Ontario's new building code is passed, Lutterworth council was told by its by-law officer and plumbing inspector.

Ernie Roylance had asked to purchase a lead solder test kit to assist him in his inspections. "As the plumbing inspector I have to certify the plumbing is correctly done," he said, adding this wasn't possible since the naked eye can't detect lead solder. A test kit costs approximately $160 to $200.

"This whole thing is going to be an education process," said Roylance. "There is fifty-fifty solder still sold in hardware stores beside the lead-free."

Lead solder in pipes is not a serious health risk. But over a prolonged period of time high doses can lead to irreversible brain damage. Small doses can damage hearing, memory and impair motor skills. The kidneys and nervous system can also be affected. Because of this, the majority of plumbers stopped using lead solder in 1988. "Our municipalities aren't big enough to hire another person to do inspections," said Roylance. Local by-law officers now double as plumbing inspectors, which has required each to receive additional training.

In preparation for the eventual passing of the new building code several municipalities, including Anson, Hindon, Minden, Dysart et al, Sherborne et al and Lutterworth, have passed a plumbing by-law. Lutterworth's took effect January 1 and Roylance has performed two inspections.

Council rejected his suggestion for the test kit and asked that he check into surrounding areas such as Huntsville and Peterborough to find out how they deal with the matter. Roylance has since learned from the Ministry of Housing it's the responsibility of the applicant to test the solder should an inspector request it.

"Lead solder isn't a major problem in copper pipes," he said. Experts agree even high lead cases can be cleared up by running a tap for several minutes. Lead free solder can be purchased at most hardware stores, with the labels clearly marked to let consumers know what they are buying.

Neighbours try to help out

Hancock then moved some of the free-floating lumber back to his home on Salerno Lake.

"I guess the (neighbour) was a little ticked off when he saw the lumber and called the cops," says Hancock, who now can laugh at the misunderstanding.

"I was a little annoyed that a neighbour would do this," says

Dyson, adding the lumber was returned the following Monday and the situation has been ironed out.

But despite their good intentions, the OPP warn that by law, the men had committed theft. In Canada there are no salvaging rights in fresh water and to prevent hassles, the OPP says once the men removed the lumber from the bridge they should have left it off to the side.

Series workers applauded

by RUTH STILL

Dear Patrons of the Haliburton Highlands Concert Series:

As outgoing-president of 'the Series' and in the wake of the Kuerti concert it seems fitting that I make a few comments and give some well-deserved credits.

Thank you subscribers for your loyal support through thick and thin. You keep the series going.

The pre-concert interview of the artist done by our local paper adds so much to the public anticipation of an event.

The concert committee, few but dedicated: Kathy Boake, Jean Clarke, Eleanor Cooper, Peggy Dahl, Kathy Rogers, Betty Salvatori, makes it all come together.

Our most recent recruit, Lauren McInnis is an invaluable resource person and the author of concert critiques.

This is no static organization. Our aim is quality entertainment at an affordable price. It is axiomatic, to dare is to risk, hence the contretemps at the Kuerti concert, and we welcome the ensuing controversy.

It was a superb performance by a genius of the keyboard. But a genius is often a driven personality for whom only his craft exists.

Beethoven was such, so irascible that he alienated all but the fewest discerning friends, yet he left the world that hauntingly lovely (sharp minor Sonata) (the Moonlight Sonata) which we so enjoyed.

I want especially to welcome the young students at that concert, all so wonderfully attentive. It will remain a memorable occasion for you and we hope to keep you as part of our audience.

Ours is also a healthy organization, financially. The new '91-'92 series promises drama, a Russian pianist, a string ensemble and as a bonus to our subscribers we hope to present the ballet.

The main ticket drive lasts until May 21. An adult series ticket is $36.00, a student $15.00.

Tickets are available from any member: in Haliburton at the Gallery or Nancy's Flowers, in Minden at I.D.A. Drugstore or Highlands Jewellery and China Shoppe.

We encourage the feedback we get from you. We badly need new blood for our executive. Regardless of the enthusiasm of our members, burn out eventually happens.

The executive meets on the third Tuesday of each month at 4:00 at the Rails' End Gallery. The annual meeting is May 21. Why not plan on joining us? Become involved — the frustration is low, the satisfaction high.

Operations of School Boards and the County of Haliburton

Further to note 1(a)(iii), the taxation, other revenues, expenditures and overlevies (underlevies) of the school boards and the County of Haliburton are comprised of the following:

	School Boards $	County $
Taxation and user charges	502,175	84,287
Requisitions	479,772	84,153
Overlevies for the year	22,403	134
Overlevies (underlevies) at the beginning of the year	221	(125)
Overlevies at the end of the year	22,624	9

These revenues and expenditures are not reflected in the "Consolidated Statement of Operations". The net overlevies at the end of the year are reported as "other current liabilities" on the "Consolidated Balance Sheet".

Municipal Fund Balances at the End of the Year

(a) The balances on the "Consolidated Statement of Operations" of municipal equity (deficit) of $(300,811) (1989 $(249,399)) at the end of the year are comprised of the following:

(1) The 1990 financial report consolidates the operations, assets and liabilities of the Township and its local boards, and municipal enterprises which includes the Cardiff Cemetery Board.

(2) The above data has been extracted from the audited 1990 Consolidated Financial Report of the Township and its local boards as described in Note 1. Copies of the 1990 Consolidated Financial Report and the auditor's report thereon, or the audited financial statements for the local boards are available at the Township Office to any resident who wishes to review or analyze the financial operations of the Township in greater detail.

People offer to help Chamber

taneous support offered by an array of individuals. People have called me and other board Members with ideas and direct offers of help. Special thanks should go to Pearl Foster, President of the Guild, who offered to contact the members about their dues and has been faithfully calling them this week.

There was a meeting of directors on April 18. Every effort over the next month will be given to collecting outstanding dues and any accounts receivable, especially those who had placed ads in the guide. All monies were due on publication. The Board realizes the difficulties of their being an off season, but we also need your support and cooperation at this time. The roadblock with COTA was quickly cleared and they are now distributing the guides. Curtis Eastmure gave out over 600 alone last week at a very successful show in Ottawa. He reports a great interest in the Haliburton Region as an alternative to the Gatineau's.

The Directors also agreed to two important motions with regard go the County. The first was an amended Tourism and Community Service Agreement that now outlines the six basic services (as opposed to the previous 10) that the Chamber will provide in return for county Funds.

The second motion called for "that the Chamber enter into negotiations with the County Economic Development Officer and interested Municipalities on a fee for service basis for consultations and marketing of our County". This motion refers back to the study adopted by the County that outlines ten specific areas that the County should work with the Chamber to help promote economic activity within our County.

Finally, Rhonda Elstone is preparing for our next meeting a proposal for "Friends of the Chamber". Interested and concerned individuals, such as retired people or someone employed and not owning a business, can now become part of our Association. This was an idea from Jock Mavor, one of the many who have come forward to help. Things seem to be proceeding, but at a steady boil. These truly are challenging times.

Cut costs or this country will really suffer

FROM ECHO READERS...

their Canada Pension Plan and all of their own, all of O.H.I.P. for their employee' and themselves. The March 26th paper states that salary costs went up 6 percent plus benefits for non-union employees. If you add the benefits into the raise it would be interesting to know the raise percentage. Mr. Wilson has suggested a 3 percent raise! I am sure that there are many small businesses in Haliburton that are not going to make a 6 percent raise and definitely not extra benefits this year.

The cottage owner who earns his or her income in another community is looking at higher taxes in two directions and if they finally have to decide which property has to be sacrificed it will of necessity be the cottage because their home base is where their income is.

These three groups of citizens are being taxed to death — Federal, Provincial and Municipal — and sooner or later, like most Canadians, will not be able to carry the load.

Many people are out of work and need Welfare Assistance. I don't argue that, but I do wonder if there is some way that they can be given work to earn this assistance. You can't walk around the town of Haliburton (and I am sure this goes for all towns in the County) without seeing pop cans, papers etc., on the street. There are many places where this assistance could be earned and it would give everyone concerned back their dignity.

We are in an all seasons tourist area close to large cities, let us start to build on that attraction with our clean air — where you can see the stars at night, clean lakes and a peaceful and serene environment. Let's build on the small business person who will not jeopardize the main tourist attraction of Haliburton.

To all those whose income is dependant on the tax dollars in Federal, Provincial and Municipal jobs, please remember that if you keep making demands you may be weakening the foundation of your incomes and once the foundation is weakened your house may fall down around you. To employees in small business, remember your employer has to make a profit or they will be out of business.

The time has come for all residents of Haliburton and all of Canada to start counting their blessings, get back to basics, set aside the trend of buy now pay later, the government will pay for it (remember you are the government), start sorting out our priorities and thank God for our many blessings.

We must start paying our debts and living within our means or we will be a Third World Country and then it will be "Goodbye High Wages, Welfare Assistance and all other benefits that we take for granted."

Dorothy Way,
Haliburton.

Send it back

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to the Editor for two reasons. No. 1, I am damn mad. No. 2, I wish to sincerely thank and support such people as Murray Fearrey and any others with the intestinal fortitude to oppose this latest County Budget and suggesting to refuse and send it back.

These people responsible for such ridiculous increases at a time when most people are unemployed and little work in sight have to be completely out of wack with reality and common sense. What is happening scares me. These people responsible are creating big city politics up here in the country and we simply cannot afford such nonsense.

I wonder if these are the same people who were trying to force market value taxation on us last winter season. I understand they intend to try it again next year, after the election of course.

The county Warden made a remark in the press that this 35.7 per cent increase was rather insignificant to the tax payer because it only applied to the county portion. I wonder if she would feel the same if she were unemployed?

That is just the point I wish to make. Let us not forget these politicians of Haliburton County next election. Let us make sure they all join the ranks of the unemployed. (Misery likes company.)

Another thing that galls me, and most people I talk to, is the ridiculous amounts of salt and sand poured onto these roads. In the winter oh yes we need some salt and sand when conditions warrant. But we don't need a fleet of vehicles, snow ploughs and sanders roaring back and forth trying to look busy, when the night before we had less than 2 centimeters of snow.

We have to pay too big a price to have our vehicles rusted to pieces or shrubs and trees killed and our wells polluted to say nothing of Kashagawigamog.

Let us rise up and teach these people a lesson. All it would take is a few of the cottage associations around these big lakes to join local people to withhold our taxes.

What do you say?

Robert A. Minto, Haliburton.

To the Editor:

In response to Martha Perkins' article in the newspaper entitled "Co-operation could stop floods", this letter is being written to clarify the position of the Ministry of Natural Resources in regard to the beaver dam on Moss's Pond. This dam is located on private property and its maintenance and reconstruction if undertaken is therefore the responsibility of the property owners. It is true that beaver dams on Crown land may only be removed with permission from the M.N.R., however, beaver dams on private property can be removed or altered at the property owners discretion.

If the property owners around Moss's Pond wish to build a dam to reflood the pond, they in conjunction with the owners of the land at the dam site will be required under the Lakes and Rivers Improvement Act to submit a design plan of any proposed structure. After review and approval of the plans by this Ministry, a work permit could be issued.

Although the Ministry of Natural Resources cannot accept responsibility for constructing or maintaining a water control structure on private land, we do want to work co-operatively with the property owners and municipality to ensure last years flooding problem is not repeated.

A./District Manager,

These offers may not be combined. Retail buyers choosing a reduced financing rate in lieu of cash rebate are eligible for 8.9% financing over a maximum 48 month term. On approved credit. Example: For $15,000 financed over 48 months at 8.9% APR, the monthly payment is $372.57, the cost of borrowing is $2,883.36 and the total to be repaid is $17,883.36. Assuming a rebate of $1,000 as the alternative, should you choose a reduced financing rate instead of the cash rebate, legislation requires that the amount of the rebate must be included in the cost of borrowing in order to arrive at an effective interest rate. In the example given the effective interest rate would be 11.78% over 48 months and the total cost of borrowing including the rebate not taken would be $3,883.36 for 48 months. Cost of borrowing will vary depending on the amount financed and term of loan.
†This offer cancels and replaces all other programs previously advertised and may not be combined with any previous offer.
‡Value reduction based on MSRP of options if purchased separately and on special package offer which is time limited. See dealer for details.

"We started rehearsing when, mid-January?"

"You get to be something you never get to be normally," says Brenda Ellis, who's normally cool, calm and collected at the Haliburton Hospital office. Now she plays a fur-coat-stealing English

"You almost hyperventilate," says Creelman. Just before she steps on stage, she's a bundle of doubts and self-recriminations: "I'm not going to remember my lines. This is really stupid. I just wasted four months of my life," she says to herself.

"You hear 'I think I'm going to throw up,'" says Ellis, remembering the night when prompter extraordinaire (and in other productions, actress) Betty Mark did.

"I actually get quite hard to live with the night before," says Lynd, whose husband Jim Andrews, plays Detective Sergeant Pape of the Scotland Yard.

Because so much work goes into putting on a play, the troupe has decided to present A Breath of Spring for two weekends instead of one, May 3 and 4 and May 10 and 11 (curtain 8 p.m. at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.) Now four months of work will get to last a little bit longer, even though there will be the inevitable let down when the curtains close for the last time.

"That's when I'm hard to live with. There's a blank there for two days," says Eleanor Cooper, who plays Lady "Knife in the Back" Miller. (Her real name is Alice but Dame Appleby is jealous of her attentions to the Brigadier, the romantic love interest of this English comedy.)

"Our true dream would be to have our own theatre," says Lynd. "Got any money? Got a building? We just need 50 seats so we can run our plays over a month and have a real following. These guys actually have fans! We really hope we can encourage more people to get out."

The respite over, the actors decide to run through Act III again.

A Breath of Spring by Peter Coke has the same delightful flavour of Arsenic and Old Lace. Instead of kind-heartedly murdering their gentleman callers, these old biddies steal fur coats from the rich to give to the poor.

In fact, Dame Appleby earned her distinction because she's raised so much money for charity, the authorities not knowing from whence her fountain of benevolence springs. Her partners in crime are equally grey in the hair, but not always as brave. Miss Hatfield often has to reach for her tonic, the bottle never leaving her side. ("But she doesn't drink," Fitzgerald says in defense of her character. "Unlike Dame Beatrice who drinks every chance she can get," says Creelman under her breath. Et tu, Brutus?)

"They've got old and cranky and crotchety in their olden days," says Lynd, who often has to mend the peace between the playfully cantankerous actors when they remain in character for a bit too long.

Yet at the same time, the play pokes holes in society's perception of the over-seventy crowd.

"Our age, that's the solution," Dame Appleby cries when Scotland Yard is about to come a-calling. "If we act as old people are expected to act, we can detain them for hours."

"We'll be full of reminiscences," says Lady Miller.

"Badtempered."

"Vague."

"Inconsequential."

"Brilliant!" shouts the Brigadier. "We'll bamboozle them with age!"

"You're not supposed to be sitting down," Lynd breaks in.

"One man..." Amson says, shaking his head as he glances around the room full of women.

Creelman is having difficulty sorting out which coat is the finest quality chinchilla and which is the jasmine mink. It's easy to understand why: when she lifts up the coats to inspect them, she's got nothing in her hands. "I'm sorry, I didn't hold onto the coat long enough," Creelman says to Lynd, even though she's just been holding air. It's like the Brigadier's invisible newspaper. Now you don't see it, on opening night you will. That's the magic of theatre.

Will they ever be ready in time? Will the Brigadier remember when to sit down? Will Miss Hatfield really feel sick when she leaves the comfort of Victoria Street's silent audience for the high school stage? Will rehearsing for a play ever be different?

You'll just have to go to A Breath of Spring to find out.

Zone gets first woman leader

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

BEING THE FIRST at something is a goal many will never reach except for a lucky few, such as local Legionnaire Sylvia Sisson.

Mrs. Sisson was recently bestowed the title of Zone F4 Commander for the Royal Canadian Legion. She is the first woman in our local zone to hold this position.

"I'm going to have to do a lot of travelling," says Mrs. Sisson, 70. Thirteen branches encompass the Legion's local zone.

But despite this, stepping into the Commander's shoes shouldn't prove too difficult for this West Guilford mother of nine and grandmother of 17. The Legion has been her second family since 1972.

"I'm only sorry I didn't join sooner," she says. "Instead I stayed home to look after my family."

"I thought you stayed home to look after me?" jokes husband Holly, a long time loyal Legion member.

The couple's involvement in the Legion began after they served together in the Royal Canadian Air Force during WWII. At that time they were stationed in several places throughout the east coast, including Gander, Newfoundland. "I was there when the hangers were blown up," says Mrs. Sisson, recalling the day when someone tried to sabotage Canada's air contribution to the war effort.

Mrs. Sisson's association with the military was fostered by her family, who saw three members in both the army and navy. This includes her father.

She credits this background with helping make her a success in the Legion. For three years in the early 1980s, Mrs. Sisson was the first woman president of Haliburton's Branch 129.

"I enjoy it. Otherwise I wouldn't have made it."

Being the first female zone commander may cause some problems, but Mrs. Sisson is ready to face them. "I know there's a tough core of men in the Legion who are hang-overs from the old days. It may not be their way of life to have woman as zone commander, but that's their prerogative."

Mrs. Sisson will be officially installed as Zone Commander at a Legion district convention this week in Oshawa.

"I'm going to have to do a lot of travelling," says Legion Zone F4's first woman commander. 'I know there's a tough core of men in the Legion who are hang-overs left from the old days. It may not be their way of life to have a woman as a Zone commander, but that's their prerogative.'

The Grandfathers 4 delight their fans with tunes from way back when...

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

THE ROVING MINSTRELS of centuries ago would have to sing before they would receive payment, which more than often resulted in nothing more than a free meal. In keeping with this tradition, some local musicians have adopted a similar stance, but with a twist; they'll sing only after they've eaten. Such is the philosophy of The Grandfathers 4.

"We always get fed first," jokes Bill Payne, one of the founding Grandfathers. "We'll even tell people we won't sing until they feed us."

To set the record straight, and to solve any conflict that exists out there among their fans, the Grandfathers 4 are actually five: Bill Payne, 63; Charlie Hadley, 60; Eldon Deacon, 66; Don Burch, 70; and George Smith, 68.

They are also real grandfathers and between them can account for 34 grandchildren, not including the several great-grandchildren Mr. Smith has. But having grandchildren is not a prerequisite to being a grandfather. All that's needed is a love for the "golden oldies", a little bit of musical talent, and a sense of humour.

"Can any of us read music?" Mr. Payne asks his fellow band members. In unison they shake their heads. Within minutes of meeting the five, an observer soon realizes camaraderie is an important part of the group's make-up.

The truth is all the Grandfathers are accomplished musicians who have been playing music for as long as they can remember. Many have worked in other bands and have performed solo, but all agree performing as a Grandfather gives the most satisfaction. "If you play music as a job, there's no fun in it," says Mr. Payne.

The group actually began forming 25 years ago, but at the time didn't know it. That was when Mr.

George Smith, Don Burch, Eldon Deacon, Charlie Hadley and Bill Payne are the Grandfathers 4 - plus one.

Payne and Mr. Deacon, both natives of Minden, ended up playing their guitars together at joint Rotary and Kinsmen dinner. Also performing on the program was Mr. Burch with his harmonica.

Like a snowball rolled down a steep hill, the three became four when Mr. Smith hired Don Burch to do some work on his Ingoldsby cottage. Mr. Smith joined up and is the group's lead fiddle player. "He came out squawking with us once and he sounded good," says Mr. Payne. "But he's still squawking."

Mr. Smith smiles at his band member's comment. "I've been playing since I was 10 or 12, with no lessons. My mother did hire a piano teacher who gave me 10 lessons. He told my mother it was useless to have me play it the way it was written. I would just get the gist of the tune, the hell with the music."

It wasn't until seven years ago they decided to call themselves the Grandfathers 4; after playing together for so long, it just seemed natural. However, the four became five when the group heard Charlie Hadley play.

Hadley, originally from Gooderham and a retired Toronto teacher, has mastered a barrage of instruments including bass, piano, guitar and the fiddle. Throughout the 1960s and '70s he played in a number of Toronto dance and swing bands.

IMAGINE'S New Year's Resolution 47
This is the year we finally got the lawn looking good - and got our charitable giving looking good, too.

"Back then I got paid," he says smiling. "Today I'm still getting paid, in food." But despite his musical accomplishments, Mr. Hadley insists son Ken is the only true musician in his family. The younger Hadley is a former Haliburton optometrist who now is the director of Waterloo University's eye clinic.

"I wish I had one quarter of his talent," he says. Ken Hadley plays both bass and saxophone and has performed with a number of bands.

Family support, especially by their spouses, has been instrumental in allowing the Grandfathers to continue the way they have been. "My wife says I love my fiddle more than I love her," says Mr. Smith. "Maybe you shouldn't print that," he laughs.

"My wife always says don't get a big head just because they like ya," says Mr. Payne of the appreciative crowds at Haliburton's Extencare and Minden's Hyland Crest Nursing Home.

Not charging a fee for their performance is how the band stays humble. Besides, it's more fun when you're not getting paid.

"By not charging we can play what want. If they don't enjoy it, too bad," says Payne. "We're not ashamed to stop for mistakes and start over. We have the ability to smooth out any problems."

But problems are few and far between since the group follows no set program. "Whenever we get up there it's more of a jam session than a performance," says Payne. As the group's emcee it's his responsibility to prepare the crowd, which is never a problem for Payne. "He's a definite frontman," says Mr. Smith of his band mate's ability to play host. Following a quick 30-minute rehearsal before each performance, the band begins with My Little Girl, their theme song. "Wherever we are I always comment that this one's for the ladies," says Payne.

Whatever their secret, the Grandfathers 4 are without a doubt the most popular entertainers who visit the seniors at Extencare, Hyland Crest and Sunrise Apartments in Minden. The group, or as many members of it as possible, try to perform once a month at each venue. The residents expect it.

With each performance, the group has marvelled at the response they get from the seniors, particularly the residents of Extencare.

"When we first started going, there seemed to me to be a lot of broken and bent bodies. But once when I thought of not coming, a nurse said 'For God's sakes Bill don't do that, they'd miss you coming'," says Payne. Music seems to be able to reach the hearts of many of the residents.

"I remember seeing people in wheelchairs, and by God they were tapping their feet," says Mr. Smith.

Seniors are without a doubt the Grandfathers' favourite audience and they refuse to play in front of anybody else. "No other group can appreciate us," says Payne.

With such classics as If You Were The Only Girl In The World and I Was The Only Boy, or The Tennessee Waltz, mixed in with their country and bluegrass repertoire, who but seniors really could appreciate the Grandfathers? Certainly not these younger generations, but that's okay, the Grandfathers like it this way.

"Every place we've played we've had people come up and say they haven't heard that song for years," says Payne. "I don't care if we get a clap or not, just a reaction."

They have been asked to perform outside of the county. But each time they refuse, opting to stay home, close to the fans who love them the best.

"I don't think you'll ever catch us at the O'Keefe Centre in Toronto," says Mr. Hadley. "We just wouldn't enjoy it."

Students surprise themselves with artistry

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

VISITORS TO THE OFFICE of J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School were in for a pleasant surprise over the past few weeks. Instead of being greeted by stern-looking principals, beautiful stained-glass windows gave them a brighter outlook on life.

"It's easy, you just have to know the steps," Brandy Harris says of the artistry of some students in Paul Way's Grade 5 class. "Cut, foil, grind, burn yourself a couple of times."

Brandy even had to do the centrepiece rose a second time because her first one didn't fit. But it was all part of learning how to create something functional and pretty with coloured pieces of glass, a sharp knife, and a blow torch.

Mr. Way is a well-known stained glass artist whose enthusiasm spread to his students.

"The way Mr. Way was doing it, it looked like fun," Steven Hewson says of why he was one of 10 students willing to pay $80 for the materials and lessons. During their lunch-hours and in their spare time, the students have been cutting away, each producing a window after a few months of practice.

"The first thing we did was smaller pieces, like angels and stockings for Christmas," says Ainsley Heyes. "Then we got into the bigger ones."

All the girls decided to use a pattern of a rose, while the boys were a bit more varied in their tastes. Erin Turner went to Toronto and saw similar windows for sale for $120, but the students all plan to give their works of see-through art away.

"I talked to my parents last night," says Steven. "I said I was going to drill a hole in the door."

"It's the best art thing I've ever done," says Ainsley, sharing an astonishment felt by her fellow students. They never knew 10 year olds could create something this nice. They don't know what they'll do next, but the glass is at the ready. Too bad Mr. Way has completed nearly every church stained glass window in Haliburton.

COMMUNITY NEWS

A generation which cares

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

FIRST YOU FOLD IT like this, Jesse Boughner says, demonstrating the intricate steps of making a magic box. Then you decorate the outside with pictures and the words Earth Day. Open up the paper box and write the numbers one to eight in very small letters in each of the triangles. Now comes the hard part.

"How many people does it take to waste 300 litres of water in one day," the eight-year-old student at J. Douglas Hodgson asks. Stumped? "One," he announces proudly.

"It takes how many trees to make a disposal diapers? One billion a year. Throw away a diaper and it takes 500 years to decompose."

"I wore cloth diapers when I was a baby," Christopher Coty divulges, anxious to prove himself environmentally friendly.

Monday was Earth Day, and to celebrate, students at the Haliburton school spent the week on projects to heighten awareness about the troubles facing the planet.

Why should eight year olds even care, Jesse and Christopher are asked.

"Since the world will be made of garbage, we'll have to walk around with tanks on our backs to let us breathe," says Christopher, who'll also tell you a lot about the rain forest if you want.

"It's the planet we live on," says Jesse, as if the answer was obvious to everyone. "If it's destroyed by garbage, we'll have nowhere to live unless they build a dome on the moon. I don't want it to be that way. I want it to stay like it is on earth."

"The world is important to us. We don't want it to be stinking and disappear under all the garbage."

Alright, those are noble words, but what is this Grade 3 class willing to do to lessen their contribution to the pile of garbage?

Let's look in the lunch pail. . . Ah, ha, there's a drinking box. Why don't they bring a thermos every day? Then they can take it home and fill it up again for the next day. No garbage.

"All your friends would be teasing you because you have a thermos," Christopher says of the problem behind this plan. Peer pressure starts early nowadays.

"Your parents need to spend money on other stuff (that you don't have to throw away)," says Jocelyn Eastmure as the rest of Christine Bailey's class joins the discussion. "Containers may cost a lot."

Kristi Bowskill-Bolin's mom says she should bring home her lunch wrappers so they can be rinsed off and used again. It's a good plan, but Kristi usually forgets.

"You can have a compost," Jennifer Cattell suggests. But would she be willing to take the scraps from dinner outside to the awaiting compost? "It doesn't take long to walk out the door," she says reassuringly.

What else can they do to help the environment? "When you go home you can turn off those leaking taps," says Chris Chumbley.

"Me and my mom always leave the lights turned on," Megan Landry says. Maybe they could turn them off when they leave a room.

For the forgetful, Jennifer has a good suggestion: make it into a game. At her house, they play hangman. Every time you do something bad — leave the tap running, leave the lights on, throw your clothes on the floor — a part of the body is added to your figurine. The first person to draw a complete body has to make all the beds for a week. "It's been going on since September so it's not really fun yet," Jennifer says. "My dad's losing, then it's me, then it's my mom."

"I get mad at my mom for leaving the computer on," Joe Arnup says. "It will get all hot and wreck the discs."

"We should write a letter to Brian Mulroney," Katherine Hagerman says.

"Last night at dinner, we talked about how everyone's cutting down the rain forest and we'll have to suffer when we grow up," says Camilla Pettit. "When they're gone, they're gone."

To do their part to help, the students have "bought" two acres of rain forest and are saving money to buy another.

Down the hall, Mike Craigen has saved up $800 to be teacher for a day. (Every time they do a job or get their work done, students get "money" points from teacher Bonnie Fitzgerald.) He holds his head in his hands in exasperation. "It's hard," he says of this teaching stuff. "You can't keep the kids under control."

Nonetheless, he does a good job of directing everyone to clean up their work stations and then gather at the centre of the room.

"It's not just the grownup's fault," Matthew Selbie says of how we got into this mess. "It's everyone's, and everyone breathes the air."

"We still have a long time to live," Carrie Heyes says of why Grade 3s might care a little more than adults.

"When we grow up, we'll have kids and they'll need a clean world," says Jesse Organ. Adults should listen to the children's concerns because "we might have a good opinion to share."

"You might learn a lot of stuff you don't know," says Stephen Kennedy.

Above all, the students just want everyone to know they have to care — and do something to show it. Says one: "There are some people in the world who don't care. If we can tell you some good ideas and you put them in the newspaper, then they'll read them and say 'Maybe I should start caring about the environment.'"

"The world is important to us," say these three Grade 3 students at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School: John Collins, Joe Arnup and Camilla Pettit. All last week they and other students worked on Earth Day projects. "You may learn a lot of stuff you don't know."

Local ambulance attendant is re-united with 'baby' he saved

COBOCONK NEWS

by: SHEILA LAKE

Congratulations to Tammy Godwin and Rick Coulten, who were married at Faith Tabernacle on Sat. Apr. 13. Tammy is the daughter of Brian and Lynda Godwin and granddaughter of Mrs. Amy Timleck and the late Gordon Timleck.

Mrs. Louise Harrison of Norland hosted a bridal shower for her friend, Karen Story of Beaverton who becomes the bride of Paul Brohm next month. The shower was held Saturday Apr. 13 and Karen's many friends showered her with a good variety of many beautiful and useful gifts.

If you get the Toronto Daily Star, perhaps you noticed a familiar face on the front page of the Monday, Apr. 15 issue. You're right, that was the one and only Ken Ferrill, an ambulance supervisor working out of Toronto, but who lives just off Highway 503 west of Norland, the first sideroad past the landfill site at Norland — and whose name you'll see on several of the Orange school buses. Back on Apr. 11, 1975, Ken was in the back of an ambulance, with an expectant mother on the way to Toronto Western Hospital and travelling on the Gardiner Expressway near the Spadina Ave. off ramp, when the new baby suddenly entered this world. The new born wasn't breathing and Ken gave her the breath of life, thus saving her life. That baby is now 16 yr. old Shawna Ken Ogar so a big birthday celebration was in order and Shawna got to meet the man who saved her life. It was a great way to remember a very special day for Ken, Shawna and her mom.

Palliative Care week begins April 22 and this is a good time to learn how to cope if you have a loved one who has an incurable disease or is dying due to age.

On Apr. 22, Earth Day will be observed by Canadians. There are so many ways each person can observe this day. Even refusing to use a styrofoam cup, or buying cereal, cookies etc. that are packed in excessive packaging, can show you are concerned. You can plant a tree — or several trees, rebuke some one you see tossing their garbage in our lakes or rivers or tossing garbage out car windows, or resolve to pick up all the litter on a section of your road or street. Every little bit helps preserve our earth for the next generation. Just get busy and do a little to keep our earth lush and green and safe from broken glass so you can walk barefoot along the beach.

The Coby Islanders hockey team and their

The Organizers of the International Plowing Match in Victoria County are compiling a book that will recall any most reliable, old or funny cure for an ailment or household hints. There is also a prize for the most outrageous remedy or hint, the most unusual and most effective. Like, what did you use before scotch tape and paper towels? What did you use for dark circles under your eyes, before makeup? For what you use for deodorant before roll on deod. came on the market?

Send your ideas to Carolyn Anstee of RR1 Lindsay, Ont. K9V 4R1 or drop off at Lindsay Chamber of Commerce.

April 15. The planter boxes and flower beds were discussed and flower chosen for beds and cemetery bed. Red Camanians and Dusty M. will be used in planters at cemetery and cenotaph. Medium height zinnias will be used at the rock river bank. President Rick Silverstone will order 25th maniums and dusty m. and Joyce Thompson will order zinnias. A couple more planters will also be purchased. The next meeting is the third Monday night of May.

Words of wisdom to celebrate Earth Day

YOUNG TALENT

by: HALIBURTON
COUNTY STUDENTS

THE GARBAGE CAN SPEAKS OUT

Each day's an adventure for me,
You never know what it will be!
Potato peelings, plastic wrap,
Waxed paper, an old mouse trap.

It could be anything at all,
It could drive you right up the wall!
Drinking boxes, an old spool of thread,
Sour orange juice, moldy bread.

Conserving is what they should do,
Natural Resources? Well, there's only a few,
Some things they give me can be used again,
Reduce and recycle, I wish they'd begin.

I wish I'd be free from this mess,
This life certainly isn't the best!
Cut back on garbage, and do it quickly,
Think about it, how hard can it be?

Todd Hoare — 7B

CLEANING UP!!!

Garbage, garbage everywhere,
Thrown down without a care.
People just look and stare,
Garbage, garbage everywhere.

Destroying, destroying everyday,
We have to stop, there is a way.
Let's all clean up so it won't stay,
Destroying, destroying everyday.

Changes, changes must be made,
A lot of laws should be laid.
Now is the time we make the grade,
Changes, changes must be made.

Now, now is the time,
To pay attention to my rhyme.
It won't even cost you a dime,
Now, now is the time.

Lauren Wilson — 7B

ENVIRONMENT PROBLEMS

Environmentally friendly is the best way to go,
But a lot of people are just saying "no".
That's our problem, so please care,
Because our world is very rare.

Jill Scott — 7B

Garbage, Litter, Laziness

Quite often we pick up these in front of our house:

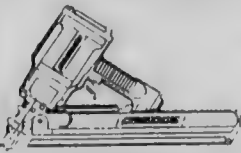

Wrapper from a candy bar
Cigarette butts
Top of a pop bottle
Straws
School work and notes
Clear covering from cigarette packages
Drinking boxes
Candy and gum wrappers
Broken pens and pencils

Broken shoelaces

And too much more to mention.
We have to pick these up (not mom any more)
And some days we loose quite a bit of time
We could have been climbing a tree instead of Picking up your garbage
So if you deposit your garbage in front of our home

Think next time of the two children who are Losing some of their playtime

From two kids who enjoy playing:
Carrie, 10, and Charles, 9, Bentley, Cardiff.

Styles change, but UCW is steadfast

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

THE ZION UNITED CHURCH WOMEN may have steadfastly served their congregations, but the same can't be said for their clothes. Styles certainly have changed over the years.

To kick off the church's centennial celebrations, the 1991 UCW held a "Fashions Thru the 1900s" show on Wednesday at the Carnarvon church. It was educational, as well as entertaining.

Emcee Elinor Hamilton began by reading a short story by Stephen Leacock, one that is probably familiar to all mothers. Young Stephen and his family plan a special Mother's Day. As the day progresses, however, it soon becomes obvious that mother has to do all the work.

The fashion show opened with Elinore Kleinschmidt wearing a beautifully detailed dress, designed to follow the fashions at the turn of the century. It was made by Mary Bell.

The nightie worn by Helen Windsor was a lot older. Garth Windsor's great-grandmother made the nightwear, paying special attention to the feminine yoke, which the present-day Mrs. Windsor was careful not to drip wax on as she carried a candle through the crowded Education Building hall.

"These were the good old days of kerosene lamps and horse-drawn buggies," said Mrs. Hamilton. "In 1909, the first motor car was driven down the Bobcaygeon Road from Dorset. That must have been some trip!"

Attention remained focused on Mrs. Hamilton as she modelled a dress patterned after one worn

Please turn to page 27

Gwen Harrison and Ann McKay, dressed in period costume to honour the UCW's Centennial Tea, enjoy the display of historical artifacts from the Carnarvon area.

FOR 16 MILLION PEOPLE A YEAR, THIS IS AN EVICTION NOTICE.

REACH OUT...

to the thousands of seasonal residents and visitors to the Haliburton area whose business is the key to your success...

It's simple, when you advertise in

THE HALIBURTON COUNTY ECHO'S

Guide

to Haliburton and Area Businesses

Summer is just ahead of us, and thousands of cottagers and visitors will soon be flocking to the Highlands. You know it's vitally important to tell these people about the products and services you sell, and that's just what The Echo's Guide to Haliburton and Area Businesses is designed to do.

1991 will mark the fifth annual edition of the Guide. Last year, 10,000 copies of the Guide were picked up and read by potential customers of your business. As in the past, we will maintain the tradition of providing a promotional article about your business equal in size to the ad space you purchase - thus a quarter page ad gives you a half page of exposure, a half page means your message occupies a full page, and a full page ad gives you two full magazine-sized pages of promotion for your business. There's simply no better advertising value!

We're contacting as many area businesses as possible, but to ensure you're represented in the 1991 Guide, call Creighton Feir or Deborah Dahlke at 457-1037, or fax us at 457-3275.

DEADLINE FOR ADVERTISING AND COPY IS FRIDAY, MAY 3, 1991

Rates for the 1991 Guide:

QUARTER PAGE (plus ¼ pg. article) $98.50
HALF PAGE (plus ½ pg. article) $180.00
FULL PAGE (plus full pg. article) $325.00

UCW takes a fashionable stroll

in 1910. Her bonnet was trimmed with lace from her great aunt. "This was the decade when Pabulum was introduced. Remember those round boxes? The first lamplighter in Minden was a Mr. Langdon who was paid $15 a year to light all of Minden's lights. He wasn't overpaid!"

Some people would like to forget the Roaring Twenties, but if those years were as fanciful as Pearl Foster's flapper dress — with fish-net stockings no less — they'll always be remembered with a smile. "Everyone was dancing, spending money as if it was going out of style," Mrs. Hamilton said as Mrs. Foster toured the room. In juxtaposition, "the first Baptist Sunday School opened in West Guilford."

The Carnarvon UCW even managed to find its own Gibson Girl, in the elegant form of Betty Culley, "imported from St. Peter's, with her beautiful black beaded shawl and complementary black bow. Following her was Dale Toye, "who would have been right in style in her Little House on the Prairie. Back here at home, the Orillia Power Development Dam was put into action in the Thirties, and what a difference that would have made. George V died, and Edward VIII abdicated."

Mary Stephenson pertly brought everyone into the Forties. Her cape was originally owned by Mrs. Hamilton's mother-in-law, but it was Mrs. Stephenson's husband, Alex, who gave her the earrings and bracelet before they were married. The watch she was wearing was a gift to Mildred Archer from Stan Archer before they were married.

There was no stopping the UCW's own bobby soxer, Joyce Wiltshire, "in the uniform so many of us adopted in the 1940s," complete with white ankle socks and saddle shoes. "During this decade, Minden suffered a dreadful fire on the main street, and a new bell tower was installed at St. Paul's Church. The Beaver Theatre opened and Agnes Jamieson, the area's first woman doctor, arrived."

Now, Doreen Bullied seemed in an awful hurry to display her de rigueur strapless satin gown. It was just a little tight, she explained to the laughter of the other women, who had all been in that type of dress situation before. The 1950s was the decade when Queen Elizabeth was crowned, the Minden Red Cross hospital opened, a new post office was built, as well as the high school, and the Minden United Church was enlarged.

The show closed with a lovely three-piece outfit modelled by Diane Mount, an outfit originally owned by Mrs. Culley. The sixties were heralded with the construction of the Christian Education building, the Salk vaccine, the Cuban missile crisis, and oh how the parents could remember this one, the Beatles.

The dozens of guests were then treated to a "boxed social" with ladies of the UCW pouring tea and coffee as guests opened their brightly coloured boxes filled with home-baked goodies. The proceeds from the sale of the boxes will be donated to the Centennial Committee. Guests were also invited to browse through the well-presented display of artifacts and memorabilia, dating back to the last century.

Group makes cemetery rounds

by JUNE PARTRIDGE

Haliburton Genealogical Group

March 28, was the date for the local genealogical group. Carol Miles and June Beene welcomed the members and new member, Henry Chulow from Toronto. The minutes were read and accepted and the Treasurer reported all bills paid. Life Memberships will be accepted in order to raise funds for planned speakers. The Cemetery Recording Coordinator, Cec Rowe, reported that the Minden, Mason, and Abandoned Pioneer Cemeteries have all been recorded and typed and sent to the Kawartha Branch of the Ontario Genealogical Group.

The cemetery at Twelve Mile Lake is the next one to be recorded. It has 200 stone markers and will be recorded as soon as the weather and ground conditions permit. Anyone wishing to volunteer their time is welcome to contact Cec.

Elizabeth Mugridge is Co-ordinating the Pedigree Index of all names being researched by the members. The Index is available to look for your connections. In discussing the possibility of including Pioneer family names, we were reminded that these would already be recorded in the Tweedsmuir History of the area.

Our fall speaker is to be the noted genealogical author Angus Baxter. The meeting will be Saturday September 7. Tickets will be sold in advance.

By next meeting all Logo submissions are to be in the committee to make a final choice on design.

The next meeting will be held on June 27, at Minden Council Chambers. The topic will be "Researching Land Records".

Volunteers thanked

by DONNA PACEY

This week is Volunteer's Week across this country and in the United States. Haliburton County is very fortunate to have many volunteers helping with programs and services that would not get done without their valuable assistance. We cannot thank you, the volunteer, enough and we salute each and every one.

The Office for Senior Citizens' Affairs receives over 2000 phone calls every month with questions about services provided by the community or by government. Around the County you will see holders containing pamphlets with the title "Answers for Seniors". This pamphlet contains a toll-free number that will have information officers ready to answer questions on everything from pensions to property tax credits or local services to help seniors continue to live at home.

Save that junk! As we have said before your junk is someone else's treasure! Our Yard Sale will be taking place on June 29th.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Community policing is on people's minds

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

At this time there is great interest and speculation concerning community policing that may be introduced for this area. The matter is under consideration and a discussion will take place at a public meeting that will be held at the Lloyd Watson Centre on May 22 at 7:30 p.m. Staff Sergeant Tom Elliot will be on hand to explain the project and answer questions.

Pat Simiana, working as the research convener for the Wilberforce Heritage Guild, is seeking items of news about the early Red Cross Outpost. She is interested in all kinds of information and stories and would love to hear from anyone who has memories of those past days. Please contact Pat at 448-2164.

Those enthusiastic folks in Highland Grove have not been idle over the winter months. They have formed a group known as the Made by Us for You club. They have renovated an old oil shed and turned it into a display area for their various handicrafts. You will find them in a section of the Highland Grove General Store by using the side entrance. They invite everyone to come and admire their hand-made items, wood carvings etc. At present they are open on week-ends, Sat. and Sun. from 9 to 4.

In these days of rising costs there is still one form of recreation that doesn't cost a penny. It is suitable for all tastes and can be enjoyed by the whole family. It can be found in your library where with no expense you will find hours of happy reading. You may choose love and adventure, perhaps gardening or crafts, discover the names of Spring birds who have just arrived, learn historical facts or about the many aspects of human life. Science, sports and fascinating biographies are also to be found. Frequent library visitors will be pleased to look over the new books just received in an exchange from Haliburton.

The library staff were well pleased with the many articles donated for the recent flea market at the Syrup Festival.

The volunteer workers at the St. Margaret's rummage sale are gratified with the number of people who have taken advantage of the good quality garments displayed. Another sale takes place in the church basement next Saturday. Many worth while articles of clothing are still available.

Minden WI plans a craft exhibit for fair

by Jeanne Sears

Minden Women's Institute members met at the Common room April 17 for their election of officers. The Pres. Jeanne Sears, welcomed all. Dues for the year were paid by most of the 19 members present. The usual collections were taken and Irene Moore reported sending 11 cards for various occasions. The yearly Treasurer's report was given by Annie Kernohan. She thanked auditors Maude Coulter and Gaila Stamp for their work.

A donation of $100 towards an item of furniture for Bowron Homestead will be noted on the Patrons' Roll at Minden County Town Museum.

Delegates to District Annual May 16 are Gwen Cox, Jean Lacey, Mary Cox and Jeanne Sears with other ladies going, this to be held at St. Andrews Presbyterian Church Fenelon Falls.

We honoured our secretary Mary Cox and Treasurer Annie Kernohan with their honorariums. We also plan to have a Craft exhibit at the County Fair in August with members designating their item for this. We also set our Summer Bake Sale dates as Friday July 5 and August 2 at the Gazebo if possible.

Mrs. Bea Berry spoke of the need of volunteers at CHACE Place if they have a course. Next regular meeting date is May 15 at 2 p.m. at the Common Room and all ladies are welcome. A social half hour followed with snacks served by the committee.

Fire department saves barn

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

On Saturday, April 13, Ken Bruce had the misfortune to have his barn catch fire from a grass fire on his property. Mr. Bruce lives on the way to Redstone & Kennis Lakes. Haliburton fire trucks came to the rescue.

Eloise Barnum is now living with her family in Willowdale. Jim and Naomi Wilson. Their son, Jeff, is now working in journalism for Brantford and Paris newspapers. Other prospects, including Bracebridge, have opened doors to Jeff when the first jobs are over. We join his parents and grandmother in wishing him well and congratulate him on his achievement so far.

Ice is out of Pine and Grass Lakes as of April 17/18, 1991.

The Anton Kuerti concert was all I hoped it would be on Sunday, April 14. I have never heard such an astonishing performance and enjoyed it to the full, despite the interruption. We met the artist afterwards, an occasion most concert-goers look forward to as the artists relax a bit over refreshments. The children present seemed to particularly enjoy this aspect. It was a well deserved reward because they had been absolutely attentive and quiet during Mr. Kuerti's concert. Next year's series' tickets are already available from Rails' End Gallery or from any of us on the concert committee. Give us a call or expect a call from us!

Of course my main interest these days is "Breath of Spring", Highlands Little Theatre's spring production of May 3 & 4, and 10 and 11th. This comedy will bring the promised breath of spring no matter what the weather happens to be on those dates.

For this also the tickets are available from members of the group at Minden's The Store Room or Paulette's on Haliburton's main street.

Carnarvon News...

We are sorry to hear Zelda McGuire's mother, Mrs. Weston is in a Peterborough Hospital after a heart attack, and Mrs. Cummins of Halls Lake is home after being in the Minden Hospital. Our thoughts and prayers are with these two ladies.

spent a couple of days with Bill and Jan McKay.

On Wednesday April 17 the Zion U.C.W. held their annual Spring Tea. The Theme this year being our centennial.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken McKay and children spent the weekend with the Max McKays.

Fred Gregory of Ottawa is visiting with the Jack Gregorys.
